first one empowers the management of identity and the second the users to actively manage their identity information and profiles. At the time of writing this second edition of the chapter, although the technical building blocks detailed in this chapter remain and are improved, they are hidden under a number of major online social networks providers: Google, Facebook, LinkedIn, Twitter, where users have already created their account and use this account to automatically log into less well known online Web sites and services. Firstly, we provide an overview of identity management from identity 1.0 to identity 2.0 and higher, with emphasis on user-centric approaches. Also, we survey how they have evolved the requirements for user-centric identity management and their associated technologies, with emphasis on the federated approaches and user-centricity. Secondly, we will focus on related standards XRI and LID issued from the Yadis project and platforms mainly ID WSF, OpenID, InfoCard, Sxip and Higgins. Thirdly, we discuss user management through social login, that seems to be the only approach that has won large user adoption and that was not expected at the time of writing the first edition of this book chapter. At the end, we cover identity management for mobile settings and focus on the future of mobile identity management.
