Cage-based Performance Capture Yann Savoye, 2013-09-17 Nowadays highly detailed animations of live actor performances are increasingly easier to acquire and 3D Video has reached considerable attentions in visual media production In this book we address the problem of extracting or acquiring and then reusing non rigid parametrization for video based animations At first sight a crucial challenge is to reproduce plausible boneless deformations while preserving global and local captured properties of dynamic surfaces with a limited number of controllable flexible and reusable parameters To solve this challenge we directly rely on a skin detached dimension reduction thanks to the well known cage based paradigm First we achieve Scalable Inverse Cage based Modeling by transposing the inverse kinematics paradigm on surfaces Thus we introduce a cage inversion process with user specified screen space constraints Secondly we convert non rigid animated surfaces into a sequence of optimal cage parameters via Cage based Animation Conversion Building upon this reskinning procedure we also develop a well formed Animation Cartoonization

algorithm for multi view data in term of cage based surface exaggeration and video based appearance stylization Thirdly motivated by the relaxation of prior knowledge on the data we propose a promising unsupervised approach to perform Iterative Cage based Geometric Registration This novel registration scheme deals with reconstructed target point clouds obtained from multi view video recording in conjunction with a static and wrinkled template mesh Above all we demonstrate the strength of cage based subspaces in order to reparametrize highly non rigid dynamic surfaces without the need of secondary deformations To the best of our knowledge this book opens the field of Cage based Performance Capture
