Exercise 2 (Module 35.2)

The fish heart pumps blood through two sets of capillaries. As the blood of a fish passes through the tiny gill capillaries, it loses pressure. Therefore, once it has picked up oxygen, it delivers this oxygen to the capillaries in body tissues rather full forcefully. As amphibians adapted to life out of the water, double circulation evolved. The mammalian heart is like two fish hearts side by side. Each side pumps blood only through one set of capillaries. The right side of the heart pumps blood only to the lungs. The left side of the heart then takes the pressure and sends this blood on its way to body tissues. This pressure forces blood through more efficient blood flow to body tissues, an adaptation to a more vigorous terrestrial lifestyle. Amphibians display an intermediate stage, with a three-chambered heart. Compare the fish and mammalian circulatory systems. On the next page, trace the flow of blood through the parts blood passes through in order.

- |                                |                          |
|--------------------------------|--------------------------|
| _____ 1. Right ventricle       | A. Right ventricle       |
| _____ 2. Left ventricle        | B. Left ventricle        |
| _____ 3. Lung capillaries      | C. Lung capillaries      |
| _____ 4. Right atrium          | D. Right atrium          |
| _____ 5. Pulmonary capillaries | E. Pulmonary capillaries |

Trace the mammalian cardiovascular system, start by labeling the parts indicated in the diagram. Then trace the route that oxygen-rich blood and then that oxygen-poor blood take. Finally, label the path of blood flow by transferring the correct words from the list.
