SMALL-SCALE FAMILY FARMING IN THE NEAR EAST AND NORTH AFRICA REGION Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2018-08-09 This report provides an overview of a study conducted in the NENA region in 2015 2016 in partnership with FAO CIRAD CIHEAM IAMM and six national teams each of which prepared a national report In the six countries under review in the NENA region Egypt Lebanon Morocco Mauritania Sudan and Tunisia agriculture is carried out primarily by small scale family farmers the majority of whom run the risk of falling into the poverty trap largely due to the continuous fragmentation of inherited landholdings As such the development of small scale family farming can no longer be based solely on intensifying agriculture as the farmers are not able to produce sufficient marketable surplus due to the limited size of their landholdings An approach based strictly on agricultural activity is also insufficient as small scale family farms have already diversified their livelihoods with off farm activities In fact developing small scale farming cannot be achieved by focusing strictly on the dimension of production

Gender and Violence in Islamic Societies Zahia Smail Salhi,2013-05-22 As a result of the uprisings that spread across the Middle East and North Africa in late 2010 and 2011 the issue of state public violence against both men and women dominated the headlines But gender based violence in both its public and private forms has for the most part remained unnoticed and is often ignored The forms that this kind of violence can take are influenced by cultural norms and religious beliefs as well as economic and political circumstances In Gender and Violence in Islamic Societies violence is perceived not only as physical harm but includes various forms of violence directed at women because they are women These include segregation in the workplace and limiting women's access to wealth gender stereotyping in the media and education verbal aggression and humiliation control of women's finances and income forced veiling restricted access to education and health Gender based violence is thus analysed in its various forms and localities encompassing both the public and private spheres within the family the general community at work and in various state institutions Here Zahia Smail Salhi brings together a wide range of examples of gender based violence across the Middle East and North Africa from discrimination in the workplace in Jordan to the physical abuse of underage domestic workers in Morocco and from psychological and verbal violence against women in Tunisia and Algeria to the practice of female genital mutilation in Egypt The evidence demonstrates that the violence far from being of universal character across the region is instead diverse in both its intensity and in the processes of addressing such violence

Global Risks and International Law Sarah Cassella,2023-12-11

Global risks present formidable challenges to international law. Although they have long been identified in many other scientific disciplines, they are currently only considered on a sectoral basis in international law in the absence of a legal definition. The aim of this book is threefold: to identify the main elements that characterise global risks in a legal perspective; to determine the characteristics that make them a new category of risk; and to analyse the changes they bring about in the main mechanisms of international law. Drawing on the relationship between international law and other legal systems and in particular national law, this book highlights possible responses to the challenges posed by global risks. The study is based on extensive practice related to the examples of climate change and pandemics but opens up perspectives on conclusions that could be common to other global risks such as financial risks or cyber risks.

Interview with the author Encyclopedia of Science and Technology Communication Susanna Hornig Priest, 2010-07-14

In the academic world, the term science communication refers both to a set of professions such as science journalism and public information work and to an interdisciplinary scholarly research specialization. Much of this research is aimed at improving our understanding of the best ways to communicate complex information, especially to people who are not scientists. Science communication specialists are concerned with giving people useful information about health, environment, and technology, as well as science itself. In order to do this, we also need to improve our understanding of how people think, form opinions, and process information. Additionally, professional practitioners in science communication are engaged in strategic and ethical decisions every day, such as: How should reporters cover the issue of climate change? Should the views of scientists who do not believe that climate change has been caused by human activity be included alongside the views of those who do, in order to give a balanced story, or does this mislead the public into thinking that both of these positions are equally accepted within the scientific community?

The Encyclopedia of Science and Technology Communication provides information on the entire range of interrelated issues in this interdisciplinary field in one place, along with clear suggestions on where to begin the search for more. Geared towards undergraduate and graduate students in journalism, communication, mass communication, and media studies, as well as towards working journalists, public information officers, and public relations specialists, this encyclopedia introduces this vast, fascinating field while challenging the reader to question assumptions inherent in communication across disciplinary boundaries.
