The Market in Mind Mark Dennis Robinson, 2019-07-23 A critical examination of translational medicine when private risk is transferred to the public sector and university research teams become tech startups for global investors A global shift has secretly transformed science and medicine Starting in 2003 biomedical research in the West has been reshaped by the emergence of translational science and medicine the idea that the aim of research is to translate findings as quickly as possible into medical products In The Market in Mind Mark Dennis Robinson charts this shift arguing that the new research paradigm has turned university research teams into small biotechnology startups and their industry partners into early stage investment firms There is also a larger surprising consequence from this shift according to Robinson translational science and medicine enable biopharmaceutical firms as part of a broader financial strategy to outsource the riskiest parts of research to nonprofit universities Robinson examines the implications of this new configuration What happens for example when universities absorb unknown levels of risk Robinson argues that in the years since the global financial crisis translational science and medicine has brought about the financialization of health Robinson explores such topics as shareholder anxiety and industry retreat from Alzheimer's and depression research how laboratory research is understood as health innovation even when there is no product the emergence of investor networking events as crucial for viewing science in a market context and the place of patients in research decisions Although translational medicine justifies itself by the goal of relieving patients suffering Robinson finds patients voices largely marginalized in translational neuroscience

Therapeutic Revolutions Jeremy A. Greene, Flurin Condrau, Elizabeth Siegel Watkins, 2016-11-23 When asked to compare the practice of medicine today to that of a hundred years ago most people will respond with a story of therapeutic revolution Back then we had few effective remedies but now we have more and more powerful tools to fight disease from antibiotics to psychotropics to steroids to anticancer agents This collection challenges the historical accuracy of this revolutionary narrative and offers instead a more nuanced account of the process of therapeutic innovation and the relationships between the development of medicines and social change These assembled histories and ethnographies span three continents and use the lived experiences of physicians and patients consumers and providers and marketers and regulators to reveal the tensions between universal claims of therapeutic knowledge and the actual ways these claims have been used and understood in specific sites from postwar West Germany pharmacies to twenty first century Nigerian street markets By asking us to rethink a story we thought we knew Therapeutic Revolutions offers invaluable insights to historians anthropologists and social scientists of medicine

Pills for the Poorest E. Cloatre,2013-08-06 The desperate need for a vast part of the global population to access better medicines in more certain ways is one of the biggest concerns of the modern era Pills for the Poorest offers a new perspective on the much debated issue of the links between intellectual property and access to medication Using ethnographic case studies in Djibouti and Ghana and insights from actor network theory it explores the ways in which TRIPs and pharmaceutical patents are translated in the daily practices of those who purchase distribute and use or fail to use medicines in sub Saharan Africa It suggests that focusing on routine practices and the material deployment of intellectual property significantly enriches our understanding of the complex dynamics that animate the field of access to medicines and helps relocate the role of law within those processes It demonstrates how intellectual property affects access to medicines in ways that are often discreet indirect and forgotten By exploring these complex mechanisms it seeks to ask questions about the modes of actions of pharmaceutical patents but also more generally about the complexity of legal objects

Compound Solutions Susan Craddock,2017-02-21 Claiming 1 5 million lives in 2015 tuberculosis is the world s most deadly infectious disease Because of the population it overwhelmingly affects however pharmaceutical companies are uninterested in developing better drugs for the disease Compound Solutions examines Product Development Partnerships PDPs which arose early in the twenty first century to develop new drugs and vaccines for infectious diseases in low income countries Here for the first time is a sustained examination of PDPs the work they do the partnerships they form their mission and their underlying philosophy of addressing global health needs with implications that extend well beyond tuberculosis Focusing on two PDPs for tuberculosis the Global Alliance for TB Drug Development TB Alliance and Aeras a nonprofit focused on vaccine development Susan Craddock argues that PDPs do much more than product development As innovative sites of humanitarian pharmaceutical production they are contravening mainstream pharmaceutical production by tying drug and vaccine research to global health needs rather than shareholder demand In largely untethering the profit incentive from pharmaceutical production Craddock shows PDPs exhibit more creative and efficient scientific practices reshaping regulatory norms and implementing more ethical forms of clinical trials that enhance community engagement and capacity building An unparalleled interdisciplinary analysis of PDPs as politically socially scientifically and economically

The Value of Transnational Medical Research Ann Kelly, P. Wenzel Geissler, 2013-09-13 What is the value of medical research With contributions from anthropologists sociologists and activists this approach brings into focus the forms of value social epistemic and economic that are involved in medical research practices and how these values intersect with everyday living Though their work covers wide empirical ground from HIV trials in Kenya and drug donation programs in Tanzania to industry academic collaborations in the British National Health Service the authors share a commitment to understanding the practices of medical research as embedded in both local social worlds and global markets Their collective concern is to rethink the conventional ethical demarcations between paid and unpaid research services in light of the social and material organisation of medical research practices Rather than warn against economic incursions into medical knowledge and health practice or alternatively the reduction of local experience to the standards of bioethics we hope to illuminate the array of practices knowledges and techniques through which the value of medical research is brought into being This book was originally published as a special issue of Journal of Cultural Economy
