Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders among different types of workers. The study included 600 male employees from three companies. Data were collected by means of a self-administered questionnaire. Results showed that the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among non-manual workers than manual workers. The results also indicated that the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among workers who had been employed for more than 10 years compared to those who had been employed for less than 10 years.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 100 male and female students. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The sessions included cardiovascular exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The results showed that the students who participated in the program showed significant improvements in their physical fitness, including increased endurance, strength, and flexibility. The program was found to be effective in improving the physical fitness of the students, and it is recommended that similar programs be implemented in schools to promote a healthy and active lifestyle.
