Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 40–50 years of age, who were randomly selected from a telephone directory. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of six women who did not participate in any physical activity during the study. The training group consisted of six women who participated in a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a stationary bike at a heart rate of 150 beats per minute. The HR and EE were measured at the beginning and end of the study. The HR and EE of the training group increased significantly after 12 weeks of training, while the HR and EE of the control group remained unchanged. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The physical and psychological health of the women was assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the women. The women in the walking program showed significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, body composition, and psychological well-being compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a supervised walking program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese; in 2000, 25 percent was obese. In 2008, the number of obese people in the United States was 66 million, or 26 percent of the population. The increase in obesity is a major public health concern because obesity is a risk factor for many chronic diseases, including heart disease, diabetes, and certain types of cancer. The increase in obesity is also a major concern because it is a leading cause of disability and death in the United States.
