

NYC DOE Framework for Teaching: Danielson Rubric

	INEFFECTIVE	DEVELOPING	EFFECTIVE	HIGHLY EFFECTIVE
1.1C The teacher displays knowledge of content in the discipline.	In planning and practice, the teacher makes use of content knowledge but seems to rely more on what is taught in the textbook. The teacher displays little understanding of how specific knowledge impacts on learning or learning of the students. The teacher displays little concern and interest in the ways of professional colleagues or is unable to share or learning of the content.	The teacher is familiar with the important concepts in the discipline, but displays a lack of awareness of how these concepts relate to past events. The teacher understands content as a subject to be taught, although such knowledge may be used well or not so well. The teacher's plans and practice reflect a limited range of preparing and responding to the discipline or to the students.	The teacher displays solid knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to past events. The teacher displays some awareness and understanding of how specific knowledge impacts on learning. The teacher plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective preparing and responding to the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.	The teacher displays extensive knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to past events and to other disciplines. The teacher demonstrates wide understanding of how specific knowledge impacts and connects to and understands the links to necessary cognitive structures that must exist in order to learn. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective preparing and responding to the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.
1.2C The teacher understands instructional practices.	Learning activities are poorly aligned with the instructional outcomes, do not follow a sequential progression, are not designed to engage students in active intellectual activity and have a monotone, low effectiveness in motivating students to take activities and offer new variety.	Some of the learning activities and materials are aligned with instructional outcomes and represent meaningful cognitive challenge, but with no different student benefits or outcomes. Instructional groups generally support the activities, with some variety. The teacher or unit has a meaningful structure, but the progression of activities is uneven, with only some meaningful time allocations.	Most of the learning activities are aligned with the instructional outcomes and follow a sequential progression suitable to groups of students. The learning activities have some with time allocations, they represent significant cognitive challenge, with some differentiation for different groups of students and varied use of instructional groups.	The sequence of learning activities follows a coherent argument, is aligned to instructional goals, and is designed to engage students in high-level cognitive activity. There are appropriate differentiation for individual learners. Instructional groups are varied appropriately with some opportunity for students to learn.
2.1C Creating an environment of respect and support.	Relationships between interactions, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally negative, unproductive, or leave no time for both and/or, cultural learning needs, and if students and have. Student interactions are characterized by teasing, put-downs, or conflict. The teacher does not deal with all inappropriate behavior.	Some positive relationships exist, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally appropriate but may reflect occasional inappropriate, disruptive, or disruptive for students' open, culture, and development and have. Students rarely demonstrate discipline or focus on work. The teacher attempts to respond to all inappropriate behavior with some results. The majority of the time students are not managing neither socially nor conflict.	Most students interact positively and respectfully with each other and support. Such interactions are appropriate to the age, culture, and development needs of the students, with positive among students are generally polite and respectful, and students exhibit respect for the teacher. The teacher manages successfully to discipline behavior for among students. The majority of the time students are polite, respectful, and cooperative, though students may be aware when teachers are not taking intentional role.	Classroom interactions between the teacher and students and among students are highly respectful, reflecting positive warmth, caring, and sensitivity to students' individuality. Students exhibit respect for the teacher and contribute to high level of civility among all members of the class. The unit is well run in a manner in which all students feel valued and a comfortable learning environment.
2.2C Managing student behavior.	There appears to be inconsistent standards of conduct, or students in the classroom. There is little or no time for monitoring of students for having a self-regulation to students' behavior in comparison and some potential students aligning.	Standards of conduct appear to have been established, but their implementation is inconsistent. The teacher talks, with some results, to monitor students in behavior and respond to students' misbehavior.	Standards of behavior are clearly appropriate. The teacher monitors student behavior against established standards of conduct. Teacher response to students' misbehavior is consistent, proportionate, and respectful to students and is effective.	Standards of behavior are clearly appropriate. Students take an active role in monitoring their own behavior and for their behavior. Students appear to understand and act on it. Teacher monitoring of student behavior is subtle and prevention. The teacher's response to student misbehavior is sensitive to individual student needs and respects students' dignity.
