U.S. Air Force Strategic Deterrence Analytic Capabilities National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Air Force Studies Board, Committee on U.S. Air Force Strategic Deterrence Military Capabilities in the 21st Century Security Environment, 2015-01-02

Since the early 1960s, the U.S. strategic nuclear posture has been composed of a triad of nuclear-certified long-range bombers, intercontinental ballistic missiles, and submarine-launched ballistic missiles. Since the early 1970s, U.S. nuclear forces have been subject to strategic arms control agreements. The large numbers and diversified nature of the U.S. nonstrategic tactical nuclear forces, which cannot be ignored as part of the overall nuclear deterrent, have decreased substantially since the Cold War. While there is domestic consensus today on the need to maintain an effective deterrent, there is no consensus on precisely what that requires, especially in a changing geopolitical environment and with continued reductions in nuclear arms. This places a premium on having the best possible analytic tools, methods, and approaches for understanding how nuclear deterrence and assurance work, how they might fail, and how failure can be averted by U.S. nuclear forces.

U.S. Air Force Strategic Deterrence Analytic Capabilities identifies the broad analytic issues and factors that must be considered in seeking nuclear deterrence of adversaries and assurance of allies in the 21st century. This report describes and assesses tools, methods, including behavioral science-based methods, and approaches for improving the understanding of how nuclear deterrence and assurance work or may fail in the 21st century and the extent to which such failures might be averted or mitigated by the proper choice of nuclear systems, technological capabilities, postures, and concepts of operation of American nuclear forces. The report recommends criteria and a framework for validating the tools, methods, and approaches and for identifying those most promising for Air Force usage.

Strategy, HRM, and Performance Jaap Paauwe, Elaine Farndale, 2017-11-10

The book expounds the macro-level relationship between strategy HRM and performance addressing important challenges that have constrained research and practice to date Adopting a critical perspective the first challenge is a narrow definition of performance that has been largely driven by a managerialist profit motive with little regard for the human element This book proposes adopting a more balanced approach towards measuring performance encompassing both organizational financial performance as well as employee well being The second challenge is that HRM has largely been considered a universalistic phenomenon rather than needing to be understood in the context in which an organization is operating The book puts forward the argument for a more context centric perspective culminating in the development of the Contextual Strategic Human Resource Management Framework The book emphasizes the importance of strategy alignment context the role of actors and a holistic conceptualisation of performance Embedded in all chapters is a focus on achieving an appropriate balance between options rather than providing a universalistic solution to all human resource management challenges
