in clinical cardiology M.L. Simoons, Johan H. C. Reiber, 2012-12-06 In recent years methods have been developed to study cardiac function myocardial blood flow and myocardial metabolism with radionuclides These developments have been facilitated through the introduction of new radiopharmaceuticals the design of special gamma cameras and dedicated computer systems However part of the information provided by nuclear cardiology can also be obtained through other investigations such as echocardiography exercise electrocardiography and cardiac catheterisation with ventriculography and coronary arteriography Thus the practising physician must select the most appropriate methodes of investigation for each patient Such choices should be based on proper understanding of both the value and the restrictions of each method In this book the state of the art in nuclear cardiology is reviewed including radionuclide angiography for analysis of left and right ventricu lar function and for measurement of shunts and regurgitation volumes perfusion scintigraphy and other methods for measurement of myocardial bloodflow and metabolism and computer processing of radio nuclide Images Each chapter has been written by an expert from either Europe or the USA who has contributed to the developments in his particular field The principles of each method of investigation are described as well as the precautions that should be taken in order to obtain high quality data Guidelines are provided for the interpretation of the data based on studies in various centers where the methods were developed and tested Manual of field fortification, military sketching and reconnaissance War office, 1871

Quantitative Coronary and Left Ventricular Cineangiography Johan H. C. Reiber, P.W. Serruys, C.J.
Slager, 2012-12-06 In recent years there has been an increasing interest in quantitative analysis of coronary cineangiograms and already for a longer time of left ventricular cin eangiograms The need for quantitation of coronary arterial dimensions has been stimulated by the introduction of new therapeutic procedures in the catheteriza tion laboratory such as the balloon dilatation technique PTCA and thromboly tic therapy by the need to study the vasoactive responses of pharmaceutical agents and also by the desire to study the progressive nature of coronary artery disease with the ultimate goal to find ways to bring a halt to the progression of coronary atherosclerosis or even achieve regression of the disease Parallel with these clinical developments rapid technical developments in computer architect ures and semiconductor memories have made it possible to digitize and store cineframes or selected portions thereof in image processors and to analyze these pictorial data quantitatively at affordable prices More than 15 years of research have been directed by various groups towards the semi or fully automated delineation of the left ventricular boundaries on a frame to frame basis Yet not a single system with fully automated capability is commercially available In the mean time many different left ventricular wall motion models have been developed again with little consensus on which model is to be preferred as no golden standard exists Autopsy
