Front-of-Package Nutrition Rating Systems and Symbols Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, Committee on Examination of Front-of-Package Nutrition Rating Systems and Symbols, 2011-01-21 The federal government requires that most packaged foods carry a standardized label the Nutrition Facts panel that provides nutrition information intended to help consumers make healthful choices In recent years manufacturers have begun to include additional nutrition messages on their food packages These messages are commonly referred to as front of package FOP labeling As FOP labeling has multiplied it has become easy for consumers to be confused about critical nutrition information In considering how FOP labeling should be used as a nutrition education tool in the future Congress directed the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to undertake a two phase study with the IOM on FOP nutrition rating systems and nutrition related symbols The Food and Drug Administration is also a sponsor In Phase 1 of its study the IOM reviewed current systems and examined the strength and limitations of the nutrition criteria that underlie them The IOM concludes that it would be useful for FOP labeling to display calorie information and serving sizes in familiar household measures In addition as FOP systems may have the greatest benefit if the nutrients displayed are limited to those most closely related to prominent health conditions FOP labeling should provide information on saturated fats trans fats and sodium

Front-of-Package Nutrition Rating Systems and Symbols Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, Committee on Examination of Front-of-Package Nutrition Rating Systems and Symbols (Phase II), 2012-01-30

During the past decade tremendous growth has occurred in the use of nutrition symbols and rating systems designed to summarize key nutritional aspects and characteristics of food products. These symbols and the systems that underlie them have become known as front of package (FOP) nutrition rating systems and symbols even though the symbols themselves can be found anywhere on the front of a food package or on a retail shelf tag. Though not regulated and inconsistent in format, content, and criteria, FOP systems and symbols have the potential to provide useful guidance to consumers as well as maximize effectiveness. As a result, Congress directed the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to undertake a study with the Institute of Medicine (IOM) to examine and provide recommendations regarding FOP nutrition rating systems and symbols. The study was completed in two phases. Phase I focused primarily on the nutrition criteria underlying FOP systems. Phase II builds on the results of Phase I while focusing on aspects related to consumer understanding and behavior related to the development of a standardized FOP system. Front of Package Nutrition Rating Systems and Symbols focuses on Phase II of the study. The report addresses the potential benefits of a single standardized front label food guidance system regulated by the Food and Drug Administration, assesses which icons are most effective with consumer audiences, and considers the systems icons that best promote health and how to maximize their use.
