Small-business concerns with ownership of certain industries like health care and other services have been a constant theme, with the Small Business Administration and various Small Business Administration agencies (Consumer Protection, Veterans' Administration, and a variety of other agencies) having long been charged to monitor them. That approach has long been criticized, particularly as the agency's personnel have been reduced steadily, leaving only a few staff members to do the work. The Small Business Administration has been criticized for not doing enough to help small businesses, particularly in the areas of financing and marketing.

100 samples were collected from 2 separate locations in the same laboratory and appear to have had their own subpopulations of their own. The samples have a large number of individuals and are thus well suited to the analysis using the global methods as well as the local methods. The samples collected in the field were from a single group of individuals and are thus well suited to the analysis using the local methods.
