Information Processing in Social Insects Claire Detrain, Jean L.

Deneubourg, Jacques M. Pasteels, 2012-12-06 Claire Detrain Jean Louis Deneubourg and Jacques Pasteels Studies on insects have been pioneering in major fields of modern biology In the 1970 s research on pheromonal communication in insects gave birth to the discipline of chemical ecology and provided a scientific frame to extend this approach to other animal groups In the 1980 s the theory of kin selection which was initially formulated by Hamilton to explain the rise of eusociality in insects exploded into a field of research on its own and found applications in the understanding of community structures including vertebrate ones In the same manner recent studies which decipher the collective behaviour of insect societies might be now setting the stage for the elucidation of information processing in animals Classically problem solving is assumed to rely on the knowledge of a central unit which must take decisions and collect all pertinent information However an alternative method is extensively used in nature problems can be collectively solved through the behaviour of individuals which interact with each other and with the environment The management of information which is a major issue of animal behaviour is interesting to study in a social life context as it raises additional questions about conflict cooperation trade offs Insect societies have proven particularly open to experimental analysis one can easily assemble or disassemble them and place them in controllable situations in the laboratory The Public General Statutes of New South Wales New South Wales, 1861

Biotrophic Plant-Microbe Interactions Pietro D. Spanu, Ralph Panstruga, 2017-04-20

Throughout their life plants interact with all sorts of microbes Some of these are detrimental and cause disease some interactions are mutually beneficial for both partners It is clear that most if not all of the interactions are regulated by highly complex checks and balances sustained by signalling and exchange of messengers and nutrients The interactions where both partners are alive for a significant part of their time together are called biotrophic In this e book we bring together 33 articles representing the current state of the art in research about diverse biotrophic plant microbe associations aimed at
