

The Colt Model 1851 Navy revolver and its purchase by the Western Australian Police Force

George B. Trotter

32 Stratford Street, East Fremantle, Western Australia 6156

The Belt Pistol of Navy size, or, as it is commonly known, the Model 1851 Colt revolver is one of the best known of the various models manufactured by Colt's Patent Firearms Manufacturing Company of Hartford, Connecticut, U.S.A., between 1851 - 1873. Colt's also had a manufacturing facility in London, at Millbank, between 1853 and 1857, and thereafter a sales office in Pall Mall. It is from the Pall Mall depot that many public and private purchases of Colt's revolvers by Australia originated, including the revolvers now under discussion.

THE W.A. POLICE REVOLVER

The Western Australian Museum Arms and Armour Collection possesses a Model 1851 Colt revolver, W513), which is marked on the top of the barrel "Address Col. Colt London". The serial number is 37468, and engraved on the steel buttstrap in script is "Police Force Western Australia" (see Figures 1 and 2). The revolver bears British proof marks and is typical of the variation known as London-London, meaning that it is a London made London type, rather than the London type actually made in the U.S.A. The London type has more rounded screw heads than the U.S. type and also has steel butt straps rather than brass. A check of London production records shows that the year of manufacture was 1856.¹

Research in the state archives resulted in the location of a document from the W.A. Agent General in London, P.G. Julian, to the W.A.

government, dated 18th August 1859. This document advises the W.A. government that three cases, containing "Revolvers and Swords for the Police Force", had been despatched per the "Crystal Palace"² (see Figure 3).

Further search revealed an invoice dated 28th July 1859, from Colts of Pall Mall, London, to the W.A. government, for two tin-lined cases containing 24 Belt Pistols with spare parts, flasks, holsters and pouches. The government, it is noted on the bottom of the invoice, were charged one shilling for each pistol to have them engraved "Police Force W. Australia"³ (see Figure 4). The third case of the shipment per the "Crystal Palace" is also revealed in the archives. A receipt from Parker, Field and Son of High Holborn, London, dated 9th August 1859, describes 24 Cavalry Swords, with bags, and knots. A note on the invoice informs the W.A. government that they were
