The number of peer-reviewed papers published in geomorphic journals has grown steadily for more than two decades and more importantly the diversity of authors with respect to geographic location and disciplinary background: geography, geology, ecology, civil engineering, computer science, geographic information science, and others has expanded dramatically. As more good minds are drawn to geomorphology and the breadth of the peer-reviewed literature grows, an effective summary of contemporary geomorphic knowledge becomes increasingly difficult. The fourteen volumes of this Treatise on Geomorphology will provide an important reference for users from undergraduate students looking for term paper topics to graduate students starting a literature review for their thesis work and professionals seeking a concise summary of a particular topic. Information on the historical development of diverse topics within geomorphology provides context for ongoing research; discussion of research strategies, equipment, and field methods; laboratory experiments and numerical simulations reflect the multiple approaches to understanding Earth's surfaces; and summaries of outstanding research questions highlight future challenges and suggest productive new avenues for research. Our future ability to adapt to geomorphic changes in the critical zone very much hinges upon how well landform scientists comprehend the dynamics of Earth's diverse surfaces. This Treatise on Geomorphology provides a useful synthesis of the state of the discipline as well as highlighting productive research directions that educators and students, researchers will find useful. Geomorphology has advanced greatly in the last 10 years to become a very interdisciplinary field. Undergraduate students looking for term paper topics to graduate students starting a literature review for their thesis work and professionals seeking a concise summary of a particular topic will find the answers they need in this

Wolf, 2016-08-08 Throughout their lifetime animals learn to associate stimuli with their consequences Following memory acquisition and consolidation circumstances may arise that necessitate that initially learned behaviour is no longer relevant The ensuing process is called extinction learning and involves a novel and complex learning procedure that involves a large number of neural entities While the neural fundamentals of the initial acquisition are well studied our understanding of the behavioural and neural basis of extinction is still limited and derives mostly from rodent data acquired through fear conditioning paradigms Fear conditioning and extinction in rodents is a spectacularly successful paradigm within behavioral neuroscience However in recent years new approaches have been emerging that examine the mechanisms of extinction learning in different setting that also involve appetitive models a broader comparative perspective a focus on other brain systems an examination of hormonal factors and conditioning of immune responses Only a broader analysis of the neural fundamentals of extinction learning will finally uncover shared and distinct mechanisms that underlie extinction learning in different functional systems The papers compiled in this Research Topic offer new and valuable insights into the mechanisms and functional implementation of extinction learning at its different levels of complexity and form the basis for new concepts and research ideas in this field Demo(s), 2016-01-01 This book is framed as a dialogue between Hugo Letiche s iconoclastic appeals to demonstrate as in a demo for a pedagogy
