

Basic Table I/O Operations with the JDE® OneWorld® Report Design Aid

by Dave Peplinski, P.Eng., MBA, Dave Peplinski Consulting.

E1 Editor's Note: Dave explains the basics of Table I/O, a powerful set of commands within JDE's Event Rule programming language. In the article, he uses the Fetch Single command to explain an alternative solution to a common issue: You are modifying a report in OneWorld and quickly discover the existing business view for the report does not contain the fields you need. He also uses the Select/Fetchnext commands to retrieve and total information from several records. Dave explains both techniques in detail in this white paper.

Introduction

Table I/O are a set of commands within the JD Edwards® Named Event Rule language that permit direct database access to the JD Edwards tables at report runtime.

As you can imagine, the Table I/O commands are a quite powerful tool to the report writer. Beyond the obvious usefulness of being able to directly access tables for retrieving, updating or deleting data when designing a new report, Table I/O is invaluable when modifying existing JD Edwards reports.

If you need to add to a report additional data that isn't currently in the business view – either the field isn't selected in the tables already included in canned JDE business view or the entire table isn't included in the canned JDE business view, you must modify the canned JDE business view (including copying it to a new object). This is a laborious process compared to the relative simplicity of using Table I/O to bring the data into the report. Of course, if you wish to include new data in the report data selection, you will have to modify the business view.

A warning: Table I/O is a database-intensive set of commands. There's a good chance that there are business functions that will retrieve the same data more efficiently, but I find most business functions lack documentation and actually require more time to configure and debug than the Table I/O commands. However, if you are designing a complex report or are experiencing long processing times, consider using business functions in the place of Table I/O.

In this article, we will review the two most commonly used Table I/O commands, Fetch Single and the Select/Fetch Next combination, in the context of two real-life JDE report modifications.

Fetch SingleThe Fetch Single command permits a one-time retrieval of data from a OneWorld table based on passed-in key fields. All the key fields for the source table must be available – which isn't always possible – in this case, we can get around the unavailable data by either a two step Fetch Single, or by using the Select/Fetch commands.

As a practical example of how to apply the Fetch Single Table I/O command, we'll add a standard cost to the canned JDE Supply and Demand report, R4051. Adding the standard cost to the supply and demand report will provide the planner additional information when working through material requirements. The Supply and Demand report is a complex report, using a workfile to generate the final output. Cost information is not included in this workfile; therefore, we must use a Fetch Single statement to retrieve the data from F4105, the Item Cost File.
