Finding Phenotypes and Genotypes for One Trait

In genetics, understanding dominant and recessive traits allows you to determine the genotype of both parents and predict the probability of offspring traits. Dominant traits are the trait that is expressed in the offspring, while recessive traits are the trait that is not expressed. This understanding is used to predict the probability of offspring traits. For example, if a parent has a dominant trait (Aa) and a parent has a recessive trait (aa), the probability of offspring having the dominant trait is 75% and the probability of offspring having the recessive trait is 25%.

When you understand the probability of offspring traits, you can use this information to predict the probability of offspring having a certain trait. For example, if a parent has a dominant trait (Aa) and a parent has a recessive trait (aa), the probability of offspring having the dominant trait is 75% and the probability of offspring having the recessive trait is 25%.

For the following questions, you will:

1. Determine the probability of offspring having a certain trait.
