Food Price Dynamics and Price Adjustment in the EU Steve McCorriston, 2015 This book addresses the important issue of food prices across EU Member States Although recent attention has focused on events in world commodity markets following the spikes in world prices in 2007 2008 and 2011 there has been comparatively little attention addressing food price dynamics at the retail level This volume addresses the characteristics of retail food price behaviour and the nature and drivers of price transmission across the EU There are several inter related features of the research reported here First the volume reports the characteristics of retail food inflation across the EU and the extent to which it differs from non food inflation Second given the different experience of food inflation across EU Member States it details the process of price transmission as shocks from upstream and world markets are passed through the food sector to the retail stage Third it addresses how the extent and nature of price transmission is determined by various aspects of competition throughout the domestic food sector and how the nature of vertical contracting between stages can determine the price transmission process Finally it outlines the potential of high frequency product specific scanner data to address price dynamics and adjustment issues and how scanner data can also be used to measure food price inflation The book will be of interest to researchers on price transmission and competition issues in the EU and given the wider interest on these issues coupled with the novel use of scanner data to researchers further afield The contributions will also be of interest to policymakers and stakeholders as they seek to make sense of and to address regulation issues as they relate to the food sector

Instability Alberto Garrido, Bernhard Brümmer, Robert M'Barek, Miranda P. M. Meuwissen, Cristian

Morales-Opazo, 2016-01-08 Since the financial and food price crises of 2007 market instability has been a topic of major concern to agricultural economists and policy professionals This volume provides an overview of the key issues surrounding food prices volatility focusing primarily on drivers long term implications of volatility and its impacts on food chains and consumers The book explores which factors and drivers are volatility increasing and which others are price level increasing and whether these two distinctive effects can be identified and measured It considers the extent to which increasing instability affects agents in the value chain as well as the actual impacts on the most vulnerable households in the EU and in selected developing countries It also analyses which policies are more effective to avert and mitigate the effects of instability Developed from the work of the European based ULYSSES project the book synthesises the most recent literature on the topic and presents the views of practitioners businesses NGOs and farmers organizations It draws policy responses and recommendations for policy makers at both European and on international levels      Food trade policy and food price volatility Martin, Will, Mamun, Abdullah, Minot, Nicholas, 2024-05-13 Food trade barriers in many countries are systematically adjusted to insulate domestic markets from world price changes a response not predicted by traditional political economy models In this study policymakers are assumed to minimize the political costs associated with changing domestic prices and deviating from longer run political economy equilibria Error correction techniques applied to domestic and world price data for rice and wheat collected to measure trade policy distortions allow estimation of policy response parameters The results suggest that systematic short run price insulation reduces shocks to domestic prices but sharply increases world price volatility and the costs of trade distortions However idiosyncratic domestic price shocks resulting from inefficient policy instruments such as quantitative restrictions increase domestic price volatility relative to the magnified volatility of world prices frequently outweighing the stabilizing impacts of price insulation This fundamentally changes our understanding of the impacts of price insulation from a zero sum game where some countries reduce the volatility of their prices using beggar thy neighbor policies that raise price volatility elsewhere into one where price volatility rises in most countries National policy reforms to move away from discretionary destabilizing policies could lower costs reduce volatility in domestic and world prices and facilitate reform of international trade rules      Agricultural Value Chain Gokhan Egilmez, 2018-04-26 This book covers the agricultural value chain issues that occur in different parts of the world and aims to increase our understanding about the sustainable agricultural value chain paradigm By reading through these chapters the readers will witness various interesting sometimes sad commonalities among different regions of the world where smallholder farmers and producers are severely affected by various agricultural policy deficiencies or mistakes and inexistences The book consists of 14 chapters which comprehensively cover over 20 agricultural products from more than 15 different regions of

In light of this socio-political and economic shift in both inland and in world markets, this book offers a thorough analysis on problems, prospects, and the way ahead for the financial integration of the South Mediterranean region. Several perspectives on financial integration and policy recommendations are put forward from a leading group of researchers specializing on the Mediterranean region.

Measuring and Monitoring Absolute Poverty in the European Union Balint Menyhart, Zsombor Cseres-Gergely, Virmantas Kvedaras, Benedetta Mina, Filippo Pericoli, Slavica Zec, 2025-03-14 This book sets out a new framework and methodology for the measuring and monitoring of absolute poverty in the European Union. A comparative needs-based analysis of poverty is presented that allows for cross-country examination. Currency and Competitiveness in Europe Klaus Liebscher, 2008-01-01 Competitiveness is a notoriously slippery concept. This volume, featuring a galaxy of economic stars, lends some much-needed precision to the term and the debate over its determinants. Barry Eichengreen, University of California Berkeley, US. This book combines currency matters with competitiveness considerations with a view to raising the understanding of exchange rate dynamics and to analysing the role of exchange rates in reinforcing economic competitiveness. The overall focus is on highlighting the link between currency developments and the real side of the economy. From a regional perspective, the contributions centre on developments in Central Eastern and South Eastern Europe and thus put a special emphasis on aspects of transition and convergence. More specifically, the book addresses key issues of financial globalization and global imbalances, the role of macroeconomic fundamentals in exchange rate economics, the role, objectives and challenges of regional monetary unions, exchange rate dynamics in transition economies and the competitiveness of catching up countries. It also addresses the structural aspects of competitiveness and the significance of qualitative and quantitative aspects of competitiveness. Offering the views of eminent academics and professionals, this book will be of great interest to economists and central bankers as well as to international organizations, universities and research institutes.

Distributional Impacts of Heterogenous Carbon Prices in the EU Magnus Merkle,Geoffroy Dolphin,2024-07-12 We analyse the consequences of carbon price heterogeneity on households in The EU from 2010 to 2020 Accounting for both heterogeneity in carbon pricing across emission sources and the indirect effects from inter industry linkages we obtain two key findings First due to widespread carbon pricing exemptions household burdens are lower than previously estimated Second lower income groups are affected disproportionately because they spend a smaller share of their expenditure on products that benefit from exemptions than their higher income counterparts Therefore imposing uniform carbon prices both within and across countries would reduce carbon pricing regressivity on household expenditure in the EU A global price would be most effective in this regard as it would raise carbon prices embodied in EU imports Further because EU economies are open and apply higher average carbon prices than their trade partners the domestic revenues exceed the costs embodied in EU household consumptions bundles This increases the scope for reducing the burden of carbon pricing on lower income households through revenue redistribution Our results imply that the ongoing extension of carbon pricing to more sectors through the EU ETS II and the introduction of the EU s CBAM should make carbon pricing less regressive all else equal

Europe Real Estate Yearbook 2008 M. Dijkman,2008      Regional Economic Outlook: Europe International Monetary,International Monetary Fund. European Dept.,2022-10-13 The war in Ukraine is taking a growing toll on Europe s economies The worsening energy crisis has depressed households purchasing power and raised firms costs only partly offset by new government support Central banks in the region and the world are acting more forcefully to bring high and persistent inflation down to targets and global financial conditions have tightened European policymakers are facing severe trade offs and tough policy choices A tightening macroeconomic policy stance is needed to bring down inflation while helping vulnerable households and viable firms weather the energy crisis But policies need to stay nimble and agile and adjust should additional shocks materialize
