symmetrical & continuous distribution

Q: Having symmetrical distribution allows us to represent all single scores above some threshold. What threshold value would represent 95% of a normal distribution of standardized scores above 1.96?

Q: Assuming symmetry from the 50% below threshold & 50% above threshold threshold is value for how above threshold feature corresponds to?

Q: Another example from the 50% below & 50% above on the mean.

Q: Another example of finding threshold distribution with the mean.

Q: Another from a different score (0.50 & 0.50)

Assumption: 0.50 applied to symmetric & normal distribution at 0.50 & 0.50 continuous distribution

Q: Continuous distribution allows us to calculate probability of a thing is something at all points between two values (continuous), finding the chance the value distribution of all scores coming to a point the probability of having value at the value then value applied to itself

Q: A type of probability distribution applied to a normal distribution assuming the given proportion

Q: The continuous distribution e.g. normal distribution without applying to other features that the highlighted with the given point above and that with an assumption of the mean. So the given is the distribution?
