What is Federal Income Tax?

Federal income tax is a system overseen by the IRS which collects money based on your earned income - as you likely already know, your federal income tax return must generally be filed by April 15 of each year.

Do I have to file a tax return?

In most cases, yes. However, if you earn less than the minimum amount, a tax return is not necessary. In general, if your taxable income for last year fell below $7,950 for a single taxpayer or $15,900 for a married couple, then you will not have to file a return, though it may be beneficial for you if you expect to get a refund or receive tax credits, such as the earned income credit.

However, even if your income falls below the threshold, you will still need to file a tax return if you earned more than $400 in self-employment income or if you owe Social Security and Medicare taxes that weren't reported to your employer.

Do students have to file a tax return?

It depends. If you meet the threshold income requirements ($7,950 for a single taxpayer, $15,900 for married couples) you will still have to file a tax return, even if you are full-time student. Moreover, even if you do fall below the income tax threshold, you will have to file a return if you want and/or expect a refund.

I am a dependent. Do I have to file a tax return?

You do not have to file a tax return if you do not meet the minimum income requirements ($7,950 for a single taxpayer). However, if you do choose to file a tax return and someone is claiming you as a dependent, then you cannot claim yourself as a dependent. In this case, the dependent should check the box indicating that someone else is claiming him or her as a dependent.

To be claimed as a dependent, however, the person being claimed as a dependent must be legally be your child and a member of the household for an entire year. Moreover, he/she must have US citizenship, must have made less than $3,200 in gross income (unless the child is under 19), and you must have provided more than half of the child's support.

Do I have to file a tax return if I am retired?

Again, if you meet the minimum gross income threshold

($7,950 for a single taxpayer, $15,900 for married couples) you will have to file a return. In fact, Social Security benefits are taxed, though at a lower rate. Moreover, if you are married, you must combine your spouse's income with your own to determine the taxable portion of your benefits. You will also have to pay taxes on tax-free retirement plan distributions.

Does my child have to file a tax return?

If the child is a dependent, he or she only has to file a tax return if he or she has more than a certain income ($5,150 in 2006). If the child is a dependent, however, the child should not count him or herself as an exemption - he or she should check the box marked "claimed as a dependent." Moreover, if the child earns more than $850 in investment income, the child should file a tax return.

Even if the child does not earn the minimum required to necessitate a tax return, he or she should file if the child had income withheld from his or her pay, as he or she may be entitled to a refund.

Which tax form should I use to file my taxes?

The choice of tax form is important to which tax credits you can take. If you do not need to take any tax credits, however, the 1040 EZ is probably your best bet. However, most people generally use the 1040A, which allows for certain tax credits and it is one of the easier forms to fill out. However, if you make a large amount of income and/or you need to itemize your deductions, you should use the regular 1040 form. Again, these are just general guidelines; for a more accurate assessment of which form better suits your needs, consult a tax professional or use one of the popular tax return software.
