Crisis And Innovation In Asian Technology:

Crisis and Innovation in Asian Technology William W. Keller, Richard J. Samuels, 2003-02-03 In mid May 1997 a financial crisis erupted in Asia after an attack by private investors on the baht the Thai currency The crisis spread quickly across the region where investor confidence plummeted resulting in massive capital outflows stock market collapses high unemployment and even insurrection The Asian economic miracle that had stimulated so much awe and even dread now invoked pity and apprehension in greater measure The contributors to this volume investigated change in the innovation and production systems of Asian states in response to economic and political upheaval They conducted empirical studies of several regional industries autos semiconductors and hard disk drives and seven different national economies China Malaysia Japan Singapore South Korea Thailand and Taiwan In the face of crisis and global competition the Asian states superimposed change at the margins seeking unique technohybrid solutions to build capabilities to compete in local regional and even global markets

The Economy-Security Nexus in Northeast Asia T.J. Pempel, 2013-01-04 The dynamics of Northeast Asia have traditionally been considered primarily in military and hard security terms or alternatively along their economic dimensions This book argues that relations among the states of Northeast Asia are far more comprehensible when the mutually shaping interactions between economics and security are considered simultaneously It examines these interactions and some of the key empirical questions they pose the answers to which have important lessons for international relations beyond Northeast Asia Contributors to this volume analyze how the states of the region define their security and how bilateral relations in hard security issues and economic linkages play out among Japan China and the two Koreas Further the chapters interrogate how different patterns of techno nationalist development affect regional security ties and the extent to which closer economic connections enhance or detract from a nation s self perceived security The book concludes by discussing scenarios for the future and the conditions that will shape relations between economics and security in the region This book will be welcomed by students and scholars of Asian politics Asian economics security studies and political economy

China's Rise and the Balance of Influence in Asia William W. Keller, Thomas G. Rawski, 2007-05-31 China's protracted boom and political transformation is a major episode in the history of global political economy. Beginning in the late 1970s, China experienced a quarter century of extraordinary growth that raised every indicator of material welfare, lifted several hundred million out of poverty, and rocketed China from near autarky to regional and even global prominence. These striking developments transformed China into a major U.S. trade and investment partner, a regional military power, and a major influence on national economies and cross-national interchange throughout the Pacific region. Beijing has emerged as a voice for East Asian economic interests and an arbiter in regional and even global diplomacy, from the Asian financial crisis to the North Korean nuclear talks. China's accession to the World Trade Organization promises to accentuate these trends. The contributors to this volume provide a multifaceted examination of China in the areas of economics, trade, investment, politics, diplomacy, technology, and security, affording a greater understanding of what relevant policies the United States must develop. This book offers a counterweight to overwrought concerns about the emerging Chinese threat and makes the case for viewing China as a force for stability in the twenty-first century.

China as an Innovation Nation Yu Zhou, William Lazonick, Yifei Sun, 2016-02-05 This volume assesses China's transition to innovation nation status in terms of social conditions, industry characteristics, and economic impacts over the past three decades, also providing insights into future developments. Defining innovation as the process that generates a higher quality, lower cost product than was previously available, the introductory chapter conceptualizes the theory of an innovation nation and the lessons from Japan and United States. It outlines the key governance, employment, and investment institutions that China must build for such transition to occur and examines China's challenges and strategies to innovate in the era of global production systems. Two succeeding chapters explain the evolving roles of Chinese state in innovation and the new landscape of venture capital finance. The remaining chapters provide studies of major industries which contain analyses of the evolving roles of investment by government agencies and business interests in the process. Included in these studies are traditional industries such as mechanical engineering, railroads, and automobiles; rapidly evolving and internationally highly integrated industries such as information and communication technology (ICT); and newly emerging sectors such as wind and solar energy. Written by leading academics in the field, studies in this volume reveal Chinese innovation as diverse across industries and enterprises and fluid over time. In each sector, we observe continued co-evolution of state policy, market demand, and technology development. The strategies and structures of individual companies and industrial ecosystems are changing rapidly. The sum total of the studies is a great step forward in our understanding of the industrial foundations of China's attempt to become an innovation nation.

Technology Transfer Between the US, China and Taiwan Douglas B. Fuller, Murray A. Rubinstein, 2013-06-26 Examining the flow of technical knowledge between the US, Taiwan, and Mainland China over the last sixty five years this book shows that the technical knowledge that has moved between these states is vast and varied It includes the invention and production of industrial goods as well as knowledge of the patterns of corporate organization and management Indeed this diversity is reflected in the process itself which is driven both by returning expatriates with knowledge acquired overseas and by successful government intervention in acquiring technology from multinational firms Technology Transfer Between the US China and Taiwan engages with the evolving debates on the merits importance and feasibility of technology transfer in the process of economic development globally and uses the example of Taiwan to show that multinational corporations can indeed play a positive role in economic development Further it reveals the underlying tension between international cooperation and nationalism which inevitably accompanies international exchanges as well as the delicate balancing act required between knowledge acquisition and dangerous levels of dependency and the beneficial role of the US in East Asia s technological development With contributors from disciplines ranging from history geography urban planning sociology political science and electrical engineering this multi disciplinary book will be of great interest to students and scholars working across a broad range of subjects including Taiwan studies Chinese studies economics business studies and development studies

Japan and the Politics of Techno-globalism Gregory P. Corning, 2016-07-08 Techno globalism is the term used by policymakers to describe the process of opening government and Research and Development programs to foreign participation This book focuses on Japan s approach to techno globalism in particular the policies of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry MITI It also explores the politics underlying the approach to this issue in the triad of leading R D centers Japan the United States and the European Union The author examines various theoretical approaches to the political economy of globalization and he describes systems of innovation in Japan the United States and the European Union emphasizing research linkages among firms national labs and universities

Democratisation, Governance and Regionalism in East and Southeast Asia Ian Marsh, 2006-09-27 This new collection of essays compares the development of central institutions of governance in the emerging democracies of East and South East Asia Seven key countries are covered Taiwan Korea Thailand Singapore Malaysia Indonesia and the Philippines Save for Singapore and Malaysia all have democratized over the past decade Because of its constitutive implications for citizen identities democratization is arguably of even greater potential significance than the economic take off that preceded it But there are distinctive features that give the experience of these seven states especial relevance First unlike analogous western patterns democratic transitions in Asia have been top down in character Second the implementation of basic democratic forms was highly compressed in time Third there were and are in most countries no major ideological or programmatic cleavages Thus the bases around which contending political forces might organize are not immediately clear This may affect the outlook for partisanship and mobilization There has been no synoptic comparative study of these developments on a region wide scale This book fills the gap extremely well

Strategic Coupling Henry Wai-chung Yeung, 2016-05-24 In Strategic Coupling

Henry Wai chung Yeung examines economic development and state firm relations in East Asia focusing in particular on South Korea Taiwan and Singapore As a result of the massive changes of the last twenty five years new explanations must be found for the economic success and industrial transformation in the region State assisted startups and incubator firms in East Asia have become major players in the manufacture of products with a global reach Taiwan s Hon Hai Precision has assembled more than 500 million iPhones for instance and South Korea s Samsung provides the iPhone s semiconductor chips and retina displays Drawing on extensive interviews with top executives and senior government officials Yeung argues that since the late 1980s many East Asian firms have outgrown their home states and are no longer dependent on state support as a result the developmental state has lost much of its capacity to steer and direct industrialization We cannot read the performance of national firms as a direct outcome of state action Yeung calls for a thorough renovation of the still dominant view that states are the primary engine of industrial transformation He stresses action by national firms and traces various global production networks to incorporate both firm specific activities and the international political economy He identifies two sets of dynamics in these national global articulations known as strategic coupling coevolution in the confluence of state firm and global production networks and the various strategies pursued by East Asian firms to attain competitive positions in the global marketplace

Innovation with Chinese Characteristics L. Jakobson, 2007-07-03 This book assesses China s ambitions to become an innovative society by 2050 and a techno superpower by the middle of the century The authors who are all experts in their own fields describe the strengths and weaknesses of research being done in four key areas IT energy nano and biotechnology

Global Change and East Asian Policy Initiatives Shahid Yusuf, M. Anjum Altaf, Kaoru Nabeshima, 2004 Annotation Although many economies have grown briskly in the last few years future development will depend on the quality and timeliness of policy actions This volume provides specific policy responses that could be employed to navigate successfully through periods of economic political and technological turbulence by enhancing both competitiveness of firms and the stability of the economies in East Asia

The Quest for Entrepreneurial Universities in East Asia K. Mok, 2013-12-18 With the rise of the knowledge economy universities are under pressure to embrace not just their traditional missions of teaching and research but a third mission of serving economic and social development This book examines the major strategies that governments in East Asia have adopted to promote this kind of innovation in the education sector

Beyond the Developmental State Ben Fine, Jyoti Saraswati, Daniela Tavasci, 2013-05-10 Moving beyond abstract economic models and superficial descriptions of the market Beyond the Developmental State analyses the economic political and ideological interests which underpin current socio economic processes Through this approach the contributors show the close interrelation between states and markets in both national and international contexts Drawing on a wide range of case studies and themes the book exposes the theoretical and empirical limitations of the developmental state paradigm offering alternatives as well as discussing the policy implications and challenges they raise For scholars students and practitioners of development Beyond the Developmental State presents a decisive break with the old dogmas of both neoliberal orthodoxy and theories of market imperfection and outlines theoretically and empirically grounded alternatives

Global Production Networking and Technological Change in East Asia Shahid Yusuf, M. Anjum Altaf, Kaoru Nabeshima, 2004-07-01 In the coming decades East Asian economies must face the challenges of an increasingly globalized marketplace This book explores the changing parameters of competition in East Asia and argues that success ultimately will depend on the ability of the region's firms to harness the potential of global production networks and to build their own innovative capability Presenting the latest findings on global production networks and the evolution of technological capabilities it provides researchers students and policymakers with in depth information and analysis on key issues related to growth and development in East Asia East Asian firms must not only achieve greater efficiency but also become more innovative offering differentiated products in order to vie with other first tier suppliers of multinational corporations These firms will also need to develop a technological edge if they are to compete with corporations from the leading OECD countries and form their own global production networks Global Production Networking and Technological Change in East Asia argues that a development strategy linked to technological advance will be necessary to foster the growth of innovative national firms that can remain competitive in global markets

Sinews of Power Yi-Chong Xu, 2017 Politics of the State Grid Corporation of China Electricity From the ministry to a corporation Overseeing SGCC the contested regimes of central agencies State Grid Corporation of China SGCC in action as a policy entrepreneur SGCC in action as technology innovator SGCC in action internationalisation

Interconnected Worlds Henry Wai-Chung Yeung, 2022-06-28 The global electronics industry is one of the most innovation driven and technology intensive sectors in the contemporary world economy From semiconductors to end products complex transnational production and value generating activities have integrated diverse macro regions and national economies worldwide into the interconnected worlds of global electronics This book argues that the current era of interconnected worlds started in the early 1990s when electronics production moved from systems dominated by lead firms in the United States Western Europe and Japan towards increasingly globalized and cross macro regional electronics manufacturing centered in East Asia By the 2010s this co evolution of production network complexity transformed global electronics through which lead firms from South Korea Taiwan and China integrated East Asia into the interconnected worlds of electronics production across the globe Drawing on literature on the electronics industry new empirical material comprising custom datasets and extensive personal interviews this book examines through a network approach the co evolution of globalized electronics production centered in East Asia across different national economies and sub national regions With comprehensive analysis up to 2021 Yeung analyzes the geographical configurations where organizational strategies how and causal drivers why of global production networks setting a definitive benchmark into the dynamic transformations in global electronics and other globalized industries The book will serve as a crucial resource for academic and policy research offering a conceptual empirically driven grounding in the theory of these networks that has become highly influential across the social sciences The New Argonauts AnnaLee Saxenian, 2006 Extends geographer's pioneering research into the dynamics of competition in Silicon Valley This book brings a fresh perspective to the way that technology entrepreneurs build regional advantage in order to compete in global markets It is useful for scholars policymakers and business leaders
