Children Of The State:

Children, Family and the State David William Archard, 2018-02-06 This title was first published in 2003 This book critically examines the moral and political status of the child by a consideration of three interrelated questions What rights if any does the child have What rights over and duties in respect of a child do parents have What rights over and duties in respect of a child does the state have David Archard adopts three areas for particular discussion on the practical implications of the general theoretical issues education child protection policy and the medical treatment of children Providing a clear legal context and a sharper contemporary discussion of the question of rights this book presents a clear introduction to the key issues in the moral and political status of children The State of Asia-Pacific's Children 2008 UNICEF

Staff, Patricia Moccia, 2008 State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP) Mary T. Ewing, 2008 The State Children's Health Insurance Program SCHIP offers federal matching funds for states and territories to provide health insurance to uninsured low income children in families whose annual incomes are too high to qualify for Medicaid Unlike Medicaid which operates as an individual entitlement SCHIP operates as a capped grant program Allotment of funds among states is determined by a formula set in law Once a state depletes a given year's original allotment other than funds from prior years made available through redistribution no additional federal funds will be made available to that state for that year States have the flexibility to design their programs to operate within these funding constraints The allotment and redistribution methods under current law have been incompatible with state spending patterns to date The State of the World's Children 2002 Carol Bellamy, UNICEF, 2001 The theme of leadership in this publication is related to the role of governments and international institutions in protecting the well being of children It is in three sections the first birth and broken promises contrasts the reality of the life of a child born eleven years ago with the promises made at the World Summit for Children held in New York in 1990 The section to change the world with children looks at the way UNICEF has called attention to the plight of children The last section actions that can change the world concludes that investing in children is the best investment a country can make and that no country has made a leap to sustainable development without investing significantly in its children The State of Mental, Emotional, and Behavioral Health of Children and Youth in the

United States National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Forum for Children's Well-Being: Promoting Cognitive, Affective, and Behavioral Health for Children and Youth, 2020-05-04 Over the past decade providers policy makers and stakeholders across a range of disciplines have taken various approaches to addressing the rising incidence of mental emotional and behavioral MEB health concerns in children and adults With the recent opioid crisis affecting young people and families across race ethnicity and socioeconomic level and thus adding to the national concern new efforts and interventions have emerged However an overarching system is lacking for the collection of data on these efforts and their efficacy A strong system for evaluating programs and distributing information could create more opportunities to improve efforts and reduce inefficiencies across programs. Additionally, through engagement of an array of stakeholders from all sectors involved with youth and families, more possibilities for solutions can be realized. To bring together some of these relevant stakeholders and to highlight some of these potential solutions, the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine convened a workshop in October 2019. This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop.

Migrant Children in State/Quasi-state Schools in Urban China, Hui Yu, 2021-11-18

Highlighting the changing landscape of Chinese urban state schools under the pressure of recruiting a tremendous number of migrant children, this book examines the quality of state educational provisions from demographic, institutional, familial, and cultural angles. Rooted in rich qualitative data from five Chinese metropolitan cities, it identifies the demographic changes in many state schools of becoming migrant majority and the institutional reformation of interim quasi-state schools under a low cost and inferior schooling approach. This book also digs into the black box of cultural reproduction in school and family processes, revealing both a gloomy side of many migrant children's academic underachievement as a result of troubled home-school relations and a bright side that social inclusion of migrant children in state school promotes their adaptation to urban life. The author concludes that migrant children's experiences in state and quasi-state schools turn them into a generation of new urban working class. The monograph will be of interest to scholars, students, practitioners, and policymakers who want to better understand educational equality for migrants and other marginalised groups.
