The Medieval Changeling Rose A. Sawyer, 2023 The first comprehensive study of medieval changelings and associated attitudes to the health and care of children in the period The changeling a monstrous creature swapped for a human child by malevolent powers is an enduring image in the popular imagination dubbing a child a changeling is traditionally understood as a way to justify the often violent rejection of a disabled or ailing infant Belief in the reality of changelings is famously attested in Stephen of Bourbon's disapproving thirteenth century account of rites at the shrine of Saint Guinefort the Holy Greyhound where sick children were brought to be cured However the focus on the St Guinefort rituals has meant some scholarly neglect of the wealth of other sources of knowledge including mystery plays and medical texts and the nuances with which the changeling motif was used in this period This interdisciplinary study considers the idea of the changeling as a cultural construct through an examination of a broad range of medical miracle and imaginative texts as well as the lives of three more conventional Saints Stephen Bartholomew and Lawrence who in their infancy were said to have been replaced by a demonic changeling The author highlights how people from all walks of life were invested in both creating and experiencing the images texts and artefacts depicting these changelings and examines societal tensions regarding infants and children their health their care and their position within the familial unit The Publishers Weekly, 1922 Books in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance Albrecht Classen, 2011-12-22 Earlier theses on the history of childhood can now be laid to rest and a fundamental paradigm shift initiated as there is an overwhelming body of evidence to show that in medieval and early modern times too there were close emotional relations between parents and children. The contributors to this volume demonstrate conclusively on the one hand how intensively parents concerned themselves with their children in the pre-modern era and on the other which social, political and religious conditions shaped these relationships. These studies in emotional history demonstrate how easy it is for a subjective choice of sources coupled with faulty interpretations caused mainly by modern prejudices toward the Middle Ages in particular to lead to the view that in the past children were regarded as small adults. The contributors demonstrate convincingly that intense feelings admittedly often different in nature shaped the relationship between adults and children.

A Complete Identity R E Johnson, 2014-11-27 A Complete Identity is an examination of the hero figure in the works of G A Henty 1832-1902 and George MacDonald 1824-1905 and a reassessment of oppositional critiques of their writing. It demonstrates the complementary characteristics of the hero figure which construct a complete identity commensurate with the Victorian ideal hero. The relationship between the expansion of the British Empire and youthful heroism is established through investigation of the Victorian political, social and religious milieu, the construct of the child and the construct of the hero. A connection between the exotic geographical space of empire and the unknown psychological space is drawn through examination of representation of the other in the work of Henty and MacDonald. This book demonstrates that Henty's work is more complex than the stereotypically linear masculine imperialistic critique of his stories that historical realism allows and that MacDonald's work displays more evidence of historical embedding and ideological interpellation than the critical focus on his work as fantasy and fairy tale considers.

The Scottish Educational Journal, 1921 Childhood Cancer in Britain Charles Stiller, 2007-02-15 Cancer is diagnosed in about 140 per million children in Britain each year. There is a 1 in 500 chance that a child will be affected in the first 15 years of life, the most frequently occurring types of cancer being leukaemia and brain tumours. This book covers the descriptive epidemiology of childhood cancer in Britain based on the unique work of the National Registry of Childhood Tumours, the largest population-based specialist childhood cancer registry in the world. The book provides a detailed account of national incidence and survival rates for childhood cancer in Britain during 1991-2000 and trends during 1966-2000. There is also an account of childhood mortality for the period 1965-2004. The diagnoses are classified throughout according to the International Classification of Childhood Cancer, the first time the third edition of this standard classification has been used for prevalence of incidence, survival and mortality data. The chapter on incidence rates is relevant to planning of health service provision and design of research studies on aetiology, whilst the chapter on trends in incidence is relevant to the possible effects of changes in environmental and other risk factors. In addition to comprehensive tables of rates, age incidence graphs are provided for all the major types of childhood cancer and possible artefacts are also discussed. The survival data demonstrates how clinical progress over the past 40 years has led to a major increase in the number of cancer survivors The role of the Registry covering history methodology current and future uses is also discussed This definitive work is the culmination of decades of epidemiological research and is essential reading for anyone involved in paediatric oncology or cancer epidemiology Harper's Dictionary of Classical Literature and Antiquities Harry Thurston Peck,1897
