1. Big Idea 3: Information Storage, Transmission, and Response – “Identifying Insulin as a Chemical Messenger” (p764)
 - a. Why did scientists have a difficult time isolating insulin initially? Scientists had a difficult time because enzymes in the digestive juices destroyed insulin, a type of protein during the isolation process.
 - b. How did they, Banting and Best, isolate insulin? They tied off the pancreatic duct which led to the destruction of digestive juices and not the production of insulin.
 - c. What were the four experimental procedures they used to identify that insulin was a chemical messenger? Four experimental procedures are identifying the source of the chemical, identifying the effect to be studied, isolating the chemical, and show that the chemical has the desired effect.
 - d. How is insulin synthesized today? Insulin today, is synthesized recombinant DNA technology, using the bacterium E. coli to produce the hormone

Hormones and Homeostasis:

1. Compared to the nervous system - Acts more slowly, but the effect is longer lasting.
2. Controlled by:
 - a. Feedback loops -
 - i. Negative feedback (many examples): the level of the hormone itself, or of some chemical induced by the hormone, inhibit the further secretion of the hormone
 - ii. Positive feedback (few examples): the output intensifies and increases output of the system
 - b. antagonistic hormones - -contrary-, hormones that have opposite effects

Technical Book Review Index ,1939 The Molecularisation of Security Christopher Long, 2021-09-23 This book investigates the way that the molecular sciences are shaping contemporary security practices in relation to the governance of biological threats In response to biological threats such as pandemics and bioterrorism governments around the world have developed a range of new security technologies called medical countermeasures to protect their populations This book argues that the molecular sciences influence has been so great that security practices have been molecularised Focusing on the actions of international organisations and governments in the past two decades this book identifies two contrasting conceptions of the nature or inherent workings of molecular life as driving this turn On the one hand political notions of insecurity have been shaped by the contingent or random nature of molecular life On the other the identification of molecular life's constant biological dynamics supports and makes possible the development and stockpiling of effective medical countermeasures This study is one of the few to take seriously the conceptual implications that the detailed empirical workings of biotechnology have on security practices today This book will be of much interest to students of security studies bio politics life sciences global governance and International Relations in general The National Builder ,1908
