These observations on the unusual behavior of β -HSE, together with recent high pressure TMA work, suggest that compression of the solid β -phase is associated with a structural transition. The present work confirms that during the compression of the β -phase, the β -phase undergoes a phase transition to a new high pressure phase and that this transition is first order. The transition from β to β' is associated with compression of the β -phase and the change in volume is approximately 10%.
