Taylor, 2002-08 The rapidly increasing global population has dramatically increased the demands for natural resources and has caused significant changes in quantity and quality of natural resources To achieve sustainable resource management it is essential to obtain insightful guidance from emerging disciplines such as landscape ecology This text addresses the links between landscape ecology and natural resource management These links are discussed in the context of various landscape types a diverse set of resources and a wide range of management issues A large number of landscape ecology concepts principles and methods are introduced Critical reviews of past management practices and a number of case studies are presented This text provides many guidelines for managing natural resources from a landscape perspective and offers useful suggestions for landscape ecologists to carry out research relevant to natural resource management In addition it will be an ideal supplemental text for graduate and advanced undergraduate ecology courses

Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation Karl S. Zimmerer, 2006-09-15 Examining the geographical dimensions of environmental management and conservation activities implemented on landscapes worldwide Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation creates a new framework and collects original case studies to explore recent developments in the interaction of humans and their environment Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation makes four important arguments about the recent coupling of conservation and globalization that is reshaping the place of nature in human environmental change First it has led to an unprecedented number of spatial arrangements whose environmental management goals and prescribed activities vary along a spectrum from strict biodiversity protection to sustainable utilization involving agriculture food production and extractive activities Conservation and globalization are also leading by necessity to new scales of management in these activities that rely on environmental science thus shifting the spatial patterning of humans and the environment This interaction results as well in the unprecedented importance of boundaries and borders transnational border issues pose both opportunities and threats to global conservation proposed by organizations and institutions that are themselves international Lastly Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation argues that the local level has been integral to globalization while the regional level is often eclipsed at the peril of the successful implementation of conservation and management programs Bridging the gap between geography and life science Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation will appeal to a broad range of students of the environment conservation planning biodiversity management and development and globalization studies An overview of current knowledge about the impacts of forest management certification Claudia Romero, Francis E. Putz, Manuel R. Guariguata, Erin O. Sills, Paolo O. Cerutti, Guillaume Lescuyer, 2013-08-01 The often claimed environmental and social benefits of forest certification remain to be empirically evaluated Despite numerous publications on the impacts of tropical forest certification virtually all are based on secondary sources of information and not on field based measurements This paper proposes an empirical research framework for a carefully designed field based evaluation of the ecological social economic and political impacts of tropical forest management certification taking into account location specific contextual factors which shape certification outcomes The paper also suggests that solid methodological quantitative and qualitative approaches be used to build proper counterfactuals on which to base the comparisons for inferring impacts all informed by a thorough theory of change and through processes that bring stakeholders together The proposed research framework represents a first step towards the design and future implementation of evaluation research in the context of tropical forest certification on a global basis It is hoped the research framework proposed contributes to learning from past mistakes building on lessons learned and enhancing decision making towards the maintenance of forest values over the long term and for the benefit of society as a whole
