Wondolleck, 2013-06-29 The United States Forest Service perhaps more than any other federal agency has made great strides during the past two decades revolution izing its public involvement efforts and reshaping its profile through the hiring of professionals in many disciplinary areas long absent in the agency. In fact to a large extent the agency has been doing precisely what everyone has been clamoring for it to do involving the public more in its decisions hiring more wildlife biologists recreation specialists sociologists planners and individuals with people skills and furthermore taking a more comprehensive and long term view in planning the future of the national forests. The result has been significant in some ways monumental changes in the agency and its land management practices. There are provisions for public input in almost all aspects of national forest management today. The professional disciplines represented throughout the agency's ranks are markedly more diverse than they have ever been. Moreover no stone is left untuned in the agency's current forest planning effort undoubtedly the most comprehensive interdisciplinary planning effort ever undertaken by a resource agency in the United States. Regardless of the dramatic change that has occurred in the U.S. Forest Service since the early 1970s the agency is still plagued by conflicts arising from dissatisfaction with how it is doing business.
