Throughout the 20th century and into the 21st the emergence of airports as gateways for their cities has turned into one of the most important architectural undertakings Ever since the first manned flight by the Brothers Orville and Wilbur Wright on December 17th 1903 utilitarian sheds next to landing strips on cow pastures evolved into a completely new building type over the next few decades into places of Modernism as envisioned by Le Corbusier and Frank Lloyd Wright who themselves never built an airport to eventually turn into icons of cultural identity progress and prosperity Many of these airports have become architectural branding devices of their respective cities regions and countries created by some of the most notable contemporary architects This interdisciplinary cultural study deals with the historical formation and transformation of the architectural typology of airports under the aspect of spatial theories This includes the shift from early spaces of transportation such as train stations the synesthetic effect of travel and mobility and the effects of material innovations on the development occupation and use of such spaces The changing uses from mere utilitarian transportation spaces to ones centered on the spectacular culture of late capitalism consumption and identity formation in a rapidly changing global culture are analyzed with examples both from architectural and philosophical points of view The future of airport architecture and design very much looks like the original idea of the Crystal Palace and Parisian Arcades to provide a stage for consumption social theatre and art exhibition Foster Norman Foster, 2001 New back in stock by popular demand an invaluable guide to the work of one of the world's leading architects Long before terms such as green and sustainability became fashionable Norman Foster was designing buildings that were environmentally sensitive and highly adaptable Today this Pritzker Prize winning architect is famous for such monumental structures as Hong Kong's new international airport the rebuilding of the Reichstag in Berlin and the Great Court at the British Museum in London This survey of more than forty years of work demonstrates how over a period of tremendous social and technological transformation Foster and Partners continue to adhere to the themes and concerns that have always shaped their work Richly illustrated with photographs and drawings and featuring text by Norman Foster this catalogue explores all aspects of the practice's achievements as urban planners architects and industrial designers In addition to airports railway stations bridges museums universities offices and private houses the book includes designs of telecommunications and energy infrastructures street furniture and smaller household items Together these works form a complex of intelligent thoughtful and visionary work by an ever changing yet consistently brilliant design team Reading Architecture and Culture Adam Sharr, 2012-11-12 Architecture displays the values involved in its inhabitation construction procurement and design It traces the thinking of the individuals who have participated in it their relationships and their involvement in the cultures where they lived and worked In this way buildings their details and the documents used to make them can be read closely for cultural insights Introducing the idea of reading buildings as cultural artefacts this book presents perceptive readings by eminent writers which demonstrate the power of this approach The chapters show that close readings of architecture and its materials can test commonplace assumptions help architects to appreciate the contexts in which they work and indicate ways to think more astutely about design The readings collected in this innovative and accessible book address buildings specifications and photographs They range in time from the fifteenth century examining the only surviving drawing made by Leon Battista Alberti to the recent past projects completed by Norman Foster in 2006 and Herzog and De Meuron in 2008 They range geographically from France to Puerto Rico to Kazakhstan and they range in fame from buildings celebrated by critics to house extensions and motorway service areas Taken together these essays demonstrate important research methods which yield powerful insights for designers critics and historians and lessons for students

Walking in Cities Jaspar Joseph-Lester, Ahuvia Kahane, Simon King, Esther Leslie, 2024-09-30 This book brings together an international group of artists and writers to respond to the question of how our new world orders force us to reconsider urban walking and urban spaces in ways which extend into the digital sphere of online dialogue and screen sharing In their reflections on walking cities in lockdown the artists and writers contributing to this book share a number of complementary themes Key to this is the question of how we walk in post pandemic cities and how such walking might motivate or be motivated by transgressive atomised or collective thoughts affects relations and experiences Here we see how navigating cities in lockdown requires us to re territorialise improvise create and de or re politicize There is for example a clear distinction between the severe lockdown measures that were introduced in Cape Town and the liberal appeal to good citizenship that northern hemisphere cities such as Stockholm chose to rely on These measures impact on the way we experience urban walking and in each case lead to deeper reflections about the heightened presence of ideological structures embedded within the urban Bibliographic Guide to Art and Architecture New York Public Library. The Bloomsbury Handbook of Experimental Approaches to Roman Archaeology Lee Graña Nicolaou, Tatiana Ivleva, Bill Griffiths, 2024-12-12 This volume is the first comprehensive overview of Roman experimental archaeology exploring its key themes methodologies and applications through a diverse array of international case studies Experiments simulations and reconstructions are important methods for understanding the past from uncovering how ancient objects and structures were made used destroyed deposited and affected underground to illuminating the experiences of tasting ancient foods fighting alongside comrades or living in replicated structures Although the incorporation of experimentation has had great success in prehistoric studies greater reliance on the wealth of literary and material sources remaining from the classical period has meant that its potential for Roman studies has yet to be fully realised The 26 chapters in this book are divided into 5 thematic parts each of which opens with a contextualizing introduction that frames the detailed case studies found in individual chapters and showcases the actual and potential diversity of experimentation as applied to the Roman past by scholars re enactors and practitioners in the heritage sector In laying out a detailed guide to Roman experimental archaeology the volume as a whole maps its past present and future and provides a firm foundation for further practical research and collaboration In doing so it reasserts that experiments and reconstructions are a significant resource for testing or developing theories rather than merely artistic replicas and that the vast amount of quantifiable data they yield can be invaluable in support of interpretations of relevant archaeological or historical evidence regardless of the period in question and beyond the confines of academia Computation Works Xavier De Kestelier, Brady Peters, 2013-04-15 Architects are now taking advantage of the computer in new ways through experimentation with algorithmic and simulation driven design Computation Works The Building of Algorithmic Thought focuses on this emerging theme in design practice showcasing built and soon to be built projects and providing a state of the art in computational design Computational design is considered to be first a design tool and second a series of instruments that can be applied in the creation of architecture It allows architects to incorporate performance analysis and knowledge about material tectonics and the parameters of production machinery Moving towards a new role as hybrid practitioners architects are taking concepts from other disciplines and customising architectural and other CAD software In addition to the discussion of built projects a further series of texts examines new custom software instruments New digital tools provide new modes of representation new methods of evaluation and new techniques for design exploration The development of new computational tools can create more responsive designs allowing architects to explore new design options and to analyse architectural decisions during the design process This issue raises important questions such as How is computation changing the way architects design Are the design tools and methods related to the result What is computational design in the context of architectural practice and How is computation changing the processes of design and construction
