Getzen, Michael S. Kobernick, 2022-02-08 The latest edition of the gold standard in the economics and financing of health care In the newly revised Sixth Edition of Health Economics and Financing an expert team of authors delivers an authoritative discussion of key topics in the economic and finance issues relevant to health care From cost benefit and cost effectiveness analyses to the economic considerations driving the choices of physicians hospitals and pharmaceutical companies the book explores the influence of financial considerations both public and private that remain front of mind for modern health care decision makers Forthcoming Books Rose Arny, 1996-10 Medical and Health Care Books and Serials in Print, 1997

Health Economics and Financing Thomas E. Getzen, 2010-01-07 Health and medical professionals rely on Getzen for its engaging introduction to the economic analysis of medical markets It is updated with the latest information in the field including a detailed look at health care reform and the emergence of Barack Obama's plan The developing health care system in China is covered to provide a more global perspective Investment cases along with a look at the ROI of specialty medical education are also presented And new C B and CEA case studies help health and medical professionals see how to effectively apply the principles and concepts Working Paper Series, 1997 Cumulated Index Medicus, 1981 Is Price Inflation Different for the Elderly? Ernst R. Berndt, 1997 Using annual IMS data from 1990 to 1996 we examine empirically whether whether elderly nonelderly price inflation differentials exist for one medical item namely prescription pharmaceuticals We assess prices for Rx for Rx drugs destined for ultimate use by the elderly vs the nonelderly at three points in the distribution chain initial sales from manufacturers intermediate purchases by retail pharmacies and final sales from retail pharmacies to patients payors We find that at the initial point in the distribution chain there are no differences in price inflation for the aggregate of drugs destined for use by the elderly vs the nonelderly At the intermediate sell in to pharmacy distribution point we examine antibiotics ABs antidepressants ADs and calcium channel blockers CCBs For ABs since 1992 elderly price inflation is somewhat greater than for the young reflecting in part the elderly's more intensive use of newer branded products having fewer side effects adverse drug interactions and more convenient dosing attributes of particular importance to the elderly For ADs elderly price inflation is considerably less than for the young due in large part to the elderly's greater use of older generic products. For CCBs, elderly/nonelderly differentials are negligible. None of these differentials adjusts for variations in quality. At the final retail sell-out point, we only examine ADs. We find that since retailers obtain larger gross margins on generic than on branded products and because the elderly are disproportionately large users of generic ADs, the elderly/nonelderly price inflation differential benefiting the elderly at the intermediate point is reduced considerably at final sale.

As a contribution to the search for suitable and sustainable solutions to finance rising medical care expenditures, the book proposes a typology of healthcare financing and insurance schemes based on the dimensions of basic vs. supplementary services and mandatory vs. voluntary coverage to analyse the design and the complex interactions between various financing and insurance arrangements in several OECD countries. This study provides a better understanding of the strengths and weaknesses of the financial and organisational structures of different countries' healthcare financing and insurance schemes. Its main contributions are the development of a novel and rigorous theoretical framework analysing the economic rationales for the optimal design of healthcare financing and insurance schemes and an empirical and institutional analysis investigating the consequences for efficiency and affordability of the complex interactions between basic and supplementary sources of financing.

Financing the Education of Health Workers Alexander S. Preker, Hortenzia Beciu, Eric L. Keuffel, 2019 This volume reviews the economic underpinnings investment and financing and institutional reforms needed to successfully scale up the education of health workers In this regard the book examines five major economic and institutional challenges that policy makers face

- 1 governance of health education organizations and systems
- 2 approaches to financing the education of health workers
- 3 the special nature of capital investment in expanding the capacity of health education institutions
- 4 public private partnerships in health education and
- 5 equity in accessing health education with a special focus on issues that arise from private approaches to the education of health workers

Much of the existing literature focuses on the quality and contents of training health workers and very little has been written on the institutional dimension of financing their training and education This book examines the complex institutional and financial models and approaches that can impact the demand and supply of health worker education programs around the world Building on the findings of the Independent Commission on the Education of Health Professionals for the 21st Century which published on the foundations and the issues of global postsecondary professional education this volume brings in new and in depth aspects such as governance capital investments and the role of the private sector in the production of health professionals thus allowing the reader to understand how the health worker education field has moved from theory to practice
