Campbell, J. Rogers Hollingsworth, Leon N. Lindberg, 1991-05-31 In this book nine scholars representing various perspectives examine institutions that govern economic activity in the United States and the dramatic changes they have undergone since the late nineteenth century They investigate how and why these changes occurred and continue to occur as markets become more volatile technology changes and international competition becomes more intense They also address general questions about the governance of capitalist economies by considering several governance mechanisms such as markets bureaucratic hierarchies associations and informal networks and by exploring how such mechanisms emerge to coordinate economic activity and affect economic performance The first part of the book describes the important characteristics of these organisational forms and provides an overview of institutional development in the US economy The second part includes case studies of the institutional development of eight economic sectors Finally based on data from these case studies the third part of the book tests competing theories of institutional change in capitalism develops a new evolutionary model of the change process and offers an original analysis of how the state influences this process Mapping Detroit June Manning Thomas, Henco Bekkering, 2015-03-16 Containing some of the leading voices on Detroit s history and future Mapping Detroit will be informative reading for anyone interested in urban studies geography and recent American history Creating Modern Capitalism Thomas K. McCraw, 1998-01-02 What explains the economic success of the U S Britain Germany and Japan What can be learned from the performances of leading business firms How important were specific innovations by individual entrepreneurs What is the nature of capitalist development McCraw and his coauthors present penetrating answers to these questions From the American System to Mass Production, 1800-1932 David Hounshell, 1984 David A Hounshell s widely acclaimed history explores the American genius for mass production and traces its origins in the nineteenth century American system of manufacture Previous writers on the American system have argued that the technical problems of mass production had been solved by armsmakers before the Civil War Drawing upon the extensive business and manufacturing records of leading American firms Hounshell demonstrates that the diffusion of arms production technology was neither as fast nor as smooth as had been assumed Exploring the manufacture of sewing machines and furniture bicycles and reapers he shows that both the expression mass production and the technology that lay behind it were developments of the twentieth century attributable in large part to the Ford Motor Company Hounshell examines the importance of individuals in the diffusion and development of production technology and the central place of marketing strategy in the success of selected American manufacturers Whereas Ford was the seedbed of the assembly line revolution it was General Motors that initiated a new era with its introduction of the annual model change With the new marketing strategy the technology of the changeover became of paramount importance Hounshell chronicles how painfully Ford learned this lesson and recounts how the successful mass production of automobiles led to the establishment of an ethos of mass production to an era in which proponents of Fordism argued that mass production would solve all of America's social problems
