The First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States is the guideline used by the legal system, in the U.S., for freedom of speech. This can be where we'll start:

The First Amendment to the Bill of Rights:

Some might argue that now in the U.S., the issue of censorship has been spinning out of control. Mainstream Broadway shows, TV shows, art, publications, articles, websites and many more have been driven to alter or cut out parts so that you can abide by the censorship standards set forth by the powers that be. For in nudism today, why are most of the folks senior nudists? , the reasons given for censoring substances vary but in its essence, it usually has to do with the morals and ethics set forth by the nation and its courts (in a democratic society).

Not all censored advice would be considered contentious. You will find many instances where censorship can be used by government agencies as a vital part of national security.

They don't tell the public what they are doing because it could compromise their ability to carry out a mission, consequently placing innocent people's lives at risk. (An example of this would be if the FBI got wind of terror cell's intent to carry out an attack. By airing intention to apprehend the terror cell's members, they run the risk that those terrorists will just run away before they get caught).
