AP Biology Exam

Section 1: Photosynthesis

Introduction

- Photosynthesis converts light energy into chemical energy (sugars) and releases oxygen.
- Chloroplasts are the organelles where photosynthesis occurs in eukaryotes.
- Thylakoids are the site of the light-dependent reactions. They are stacked membranes where light energy is captured and converted into chemical energy (ATP and NADPH).
- Stroma is the fluid-filled space surrounding the thylakoids. It is the site of the Calvin cycle, where carbon dioxide is fixed into sugars.
- Light-dependent reactions occur in the thylakoids. Light energy is used to split water (H_2O) into oxygen (O_2) and protons (H^+). Electrons from water are transferred to photosystem II and then to photosystem I, where they are used to reduce NADP⁺ to NADPH.
- Calvin cycle occurs in the stroma. It uses ATP and NADPH from the light-dependent reactions to fix carbon dioxide into glucose. The cycle consists of three main stages: carbon fixation, reduction, and regeneration.
- Photosynthesis is an endothermic process that requires light energy. It is the primary source of energy for most ecosystems.
- Light intensity is a limiting factor for photosynthesis. As light intensity increases, the rate of photosynthesis increases until it reaches a plateau.
- CO₂ concentration is another limiting factor. Increasing CO₂ concentration increases the rate of photosynthesis until it reaches a plateau.
- Temperature also affects the rate of photosynthesis. The rate increases with temperature up to an optimal point, after which it decreases.
