

What's the Central Idea?

Jimmy woke up on Saturday morning. He wanted to go out to play, but he did not have any clean clothes to wear. He looked in his drawers. He looked in his closets. There were no clean clothes! Jimmy tiptoed downstairs in his underwear and looked in the washing machine. There were his clothes. All of them were wet. So Jimmy put them in the hamper, carried them outside, and hung them out on the line to dry. Luckily, nobody saw him because none of his neighbors were home! The sun quickly dried his clothes. By afternoon, Jimmy was dressed and ready to go outside and play.

1. What is the Central Idea of the paragraph?

- A. Jimmy wore his underwear outside.
- B. Jimmy had no clean clothes to wear when he woke up.
- C. Jimmy must not have a dryer.
- D. Jimmy's neighbors weren't home.

Empowering Ourselves and Transforming Schools Judith W. Irwin, 1996-09-12 In this readable and ground breaking text Irwin examines the forces that keep educators and students from feeling fully empowered She defines empowerment as gaining the power to self actualize and to facilitate this for others Grounding her arguments in feminist and critical examinations of domination Irwin begins by defining empowerment as fundamentally opposed to domination She then examines the implications of this definition for our educational system This book encourages the reader to consider new directions for educational reform and synthesizes current innovations under the umbrella philosophy of empowerment suggesting how the change from the patriarchal paradigm to one based on cooperation and connection might revolutionize the organization of schools and their classrooms The reader is challenged to develop his or her own philosophy and agenda for change through a series of reflective activities A comparative case study of five empowered teachers is included to demonstrate that empowerment is an individual as well as a collective process

Values in Science Education Deborah Corrigan, Cathy Bunting, Angela Fitzgerald, Alister Jones, 2020-05-18 In 2007 the Monash Kings College London International Centre for the Study of Science and Mathematics Curriculum edited a book called The Re emergence of Values in Science Education This book reflects on how values have been considered since this original publication particularly in terms of socio cultural economic and political factors that have impacted broadly on science technology and society and more specifically on informal and formal science curricula Hence the title of this book has been framed as Values in Science Education The shifting sands As in the first book this collection focuses on values that are centrally associated with science and its teaching and not the more general notion of values such as cooperation or teamwork that are also important values in current curricula Such values have indeed become more of a focus in science education This may be a response to the changing global context where technological changes have been rapid and accelerating In such complex and risky environments it is our guiding principles that become the important mainstays of our decisions and practices In terms of science education what is becoming clearer is that traditional content and traditional science and scientific methods are not enough for science and hence science education to meet such challenges While shifts in values in science education continue tensions remain in curriculum development and implementation as evidenced by the continued diversity of views about what and whose values matter most
