INTRODUCTION

'Animate' means 'to give life to'. Animations are created from a sequence of still images. Each image is slightly changed from the previous one with respect to one or more objects in the image. The images are then displayed rapidly in succession so that the eye is fooled into perceiving continuous motion due to persistence of vision. This is the tendency of the eye and brain to continue to perceive an image even after it has disappeared. For example, a sequence of images of a bird showing various positions of its wings (Fig. 9.1) when displayed rapidly one after another gives the illusion of the bird flapping its wings. In this respect animation uses the same principles as motion video. However animation generally deals with graphics drawn by individuals, either by hand or by using software, in contrast to motion video, which deals with actual photographs of real-world objects taken through a camera. Animation can also involve a model, which is changed by small amounts at a time and then repeatedly photographed. This type of animation is referred to a stop motion animation. Traditionally animation sequences are created by two types of artists: the lead artists or experts who draw those frames where major changes take place within the sequence, called key-frames, while the assistants draw a number of frames in between the key-frames, a process called tweening. The process was quite laborious and time-consuming. Fortunately computers nowadays can be used to do the tweening process thereby cutting down the time and making the drawings more accurate. Animation file formats like animated-GIF and Flash-SWF allow us to view animations on a computer or over the Internet.
