Disability Psychotherapy Innovative Approach Trauma Informed Ebook:

Disability Psychotherapy Patricia Frankish, 2018-05-08 Much has been written about cognitive development in those who are cognitively impaired Much is written about attachment for people who don't have disabilities Yet people with disabilities have suffered discrimination and neglect of their emotional needs perhaps because the pain of difference cannot be tolerated perhaps because of lack of will or lack of knowledge This book aims to help to fill the knowledge gap and to encourage others to overcome their resistance to facing the pain and will be an important contribution to our understanding of the world of disability and emotional deprivation In this book a result of over twenty years experience with people who have disabilities and additional distress as a result of traumatic life experiences an attempt is made to bring together what we know about early emotional development and the consequences of failure to provide an emotionally nurturing experience and the results are then applied to people with disabilities

Trauma and Intellectual Disability: Acknowledgement, Identification & Intervention Alan Skelly, Nigel Beail, Pat Frankish, 2021-09 This book is about Trauma Informed Care TIC for people who have intellectual disabilities ID The provision of health and social care services is becoming more trauma informed including in services for people with ID where the experience of trauma is being increasingly acknowledged This book addresses a gap in resources to guide those supporting people with ID by showing how services can work in a trauma informed way Including contributions from authoritative professionals in the field and a powerful account of abuse from an expert by experience the book provides an overview of the history which underpins the importance of trauma and TIC and the impact of trauma on people who have ID The second part of the book looks at trauma informed services and a growing and diverse range of therapeutic interventions including positive behavioural support intensive interaction cognitive behavioural psychotherapy dyadic interpersonal psychotherapy developmental and psychodynamic approaches

Trauma-Informed Care in Intellectual Disability Pat Frankish, 2020-01-30 Recent studies have identified that there is a high incidence and prevalence of trauma amongst people with intellectual disabilities which often results in arrested emotional development Some of this relates to experiences of being restrained or separated from people they know and some to early traumatic events such as abandonment or neglect Historically most of the consequential emotional difficulties have been labelled as an effect of the disability or more recently as challenging behaviour For years psychotherapy has been denied to people with intellectual disabilities who have experienced trauma on the grounds that they could not benefit from it While this has proved not to be the case and attempts are being made to redress the balance individual psychotherapy will always be in short supply Trauma informed care in Intellectual Disability will enable support staff to work therapeutically Written by Dr Pat Frankish a clinical psychologist with many years of experience in the field of intellectual disability and psychotherapy whose work is dedicated to the development and growth of Trauma Informed Care as a model of working with people with disabilities

Intellectual Disability, Trauma and Psychotherapy Tamsin Cottis, 2008-11-03 People with intellectual disabilities have emotional and mental health needs just like anyone else Until recently however there has been little research of effective psychological treatment or direct accessible psychotherapy provision for this client group Intellectual Disability Trauma and Psychotherapy focuses on the delivery of psychotherapy services for those with intellectual disabilities Leading professionals in this specialist field are brought together to describe the history theory and practice of their work in twelve focused chapters that draw on the work of psychotherapists including Bion Winnicott Sinason and Alvarez Topics covered include therapeutic responses to cultural and religious diversity support for parents with intellectual disabilities developing healthy and secure attachments within the family dealing with intense feelings of shame helping clients to cope with traumatic sexual experiences Drawing on over a decade of pioneering practitioner experience at Respond a government funded psychotherapy service for people with learning disabilities based in central London this book explores the practical issues in providing therapy to this client group whether individually in families in groups or by the use of telephone counselling It closes with a chapter exploring the way forward for those who wish to develop services of this kind
