Behavioral economists and long time critic of mainstream economics suggests that people in mainstream economic models can think like Albert Einstein, store as much memory as IBM's Big Blue and exercise the will power of Mahatma Gandhi, suggesting that such a view of real world modern homo sapiens is simply wrongheaded. Indeed Thaler and other behavioral economists and psychology have documented a variety of ways in which real world people fall far short of mainstream economists idealized economic actor perfectly rational homo economicus. Behavioral economist Daniel Ariely has concluded that real world people not only exhibit an array of decision making frailties and biases they are predictably irrational, a position now shared by so many behavioral economists, psychologists, sociologists and evolutionary biologists that a defense of the core rationality premise of modern economics is demanded. The Economics of War
