Abstract

These structural conditions need to be addressed before decentralization, and government services as such, can be introduced in partnership. This will need to be monitored by a specialized service institution. Despite the scope of this problem, the community leaders have not been able to report on perceived needs or demands for change.

THESE

There are two types of mutations in the DNA sequence. A mutation is a change in the DNA sequence. A mutation can be a point mutation, which is a change in a single nucleotide, or a structural mutation, which is a change in the structure of the DNA molecule. Point mutations can be silent, missense, or nonsense. Silent mutations do not change the amino acid sequence of a protein. Missense mutations change one amino acid in a protein. Nonsense mutations change a single nucleotide to a stop codon, which results in a premature stop of protein synthesis. Structural mutations can be deletions, insertions, or duplications. Deletions are the loss of a segment of DNA. Insertions are the addition of a segment of DNA. Duplications are the repetition of a segment of DNA. Structural mutations can be harmful or beneficial, depending on the location and the nature of the mutation.
