 Rothman, 2014-03-25 William Rothman argues that the driving force of Hitchcock s work was his struggle to reconcile the dark vision of his favorite Oscar Wilde quote Each man kills the thing he loves with the quintessentially American philosophy articulated in Emerson s writings that gave classical Hollywood movies of the New Deal era their extraordinary combination of popularity and artistic seriousness A Hitchcock thriller could be a comedy of remarriage or a melodrama of an unknown woman both Emersonian genres except for the murderous villain and godlike author Hitchcock who pulls the villain s strings and ours Because Hitchcock believed that the camera has a murderous aspect the question What if anything justifies killing which every Hitchcock film engages was for him a disturbing question about his own art Tracing the trajectory of Hitchcock s career Rothman discerns a progression in the films meditations on murder and artistic creation This progression culminates in Marnie 1964 Hitchcock s most controversial film in which Hitchcock overcame his ambivalence and fully embraced the Emersonian worldview he had always also resisted Reading key Emerson passages with the degree of attention he accords to Hitchcock sequences Rothman discovers surprising affinities between Hitchcock s way of thinking cinematically and the philosophical way of thinking Emerson's essays exemplify He finds that the terms in which Emerson thought about reality about our flux of moods about what it is within us that never changes about freedom about America about reading about writing and about thinking are remarkably pertinent to our experience of films and to thinking and writing about them He also reflects on the implications of this discovery not only for Hitchcock scholarship but also for film criticism in general
