Mayo,2001-03-01 Like many other northern clergymen after the Civil War A D Mayo became interested in the role that education could play in rebuilding southern society From 1880 to 1900 he traveled from Virginia to Texas as an educational missionary advocating the new education theories of the 1840s and 1850s In time he came to be considered one of the most perceptive observers of southern education during the period from the end of Reconstruction to the rise of the Redeemer governments in the 1890s Mayo was convinced that the changes in southern society that Reconstruction had failed to bring about could be realized under a sound educational system Learning he believed should be based on individual needs rather than on rote memorization of facts and teachers should be recruited from those trained in the civilizing values In Southern Women Mayo set forth at length the ideas that southern white women were the ideal ones to transmit learning to the young blacks Stressing the greatly expanding role of these women because of the war Mayo saw them as a kind of elite trained in the ideals and culture of the Old South but receptive to the values of the New South In their introduction Dan Carter and Amy Friedlander place Mayo in the context of nineteenth century intellectual and social currents and provide an interesting perspective on his often surprisingly contemporary sounding ideas on education The Color of Culture Daniel H. Krymkowski,2021-01-15 Utilizing written sources as well as nationally representative survey data Daniel H Krymkowski analyzes the extent and causes of African American underrepresentation in the cultural realms of golf hiking hunting and fishing water sports winter sports classical music painting and sculpture ballet and the theater African American participation significantly lags behind that of non Hispanic whites in all of these areas and it is not due to an aversion to these types of activities Rather as Krymkowski shows its primary sources are racial ethnic socioeconomic differences as well as historic and contemporary discrimination both overt and subtle These causes are rooted in the systemic racism that continues to plague the United States The lack of opportunity to participate in such cultural forms deprives African Americans of aesthetic experiences that are central to the human condition and it has implications for both health and the accumulation of cultural and social capital Krymkowski also explores current efforts to increase African American representation in these areas of culture and discusses the benefits of doing so Oleomargarine United States.
