Science Cultivating Practice H. Maat,2013-04-17 Science Cultivating Practice is an institutional history of agricultural science in the Netherlands and its overseas territories The focus of this study is the variety of views about a proper relationship between science and agricultural practice Such views and plans materialised in the overall organisation of research and education Moreover the book provides case studies of genetics and plant breeding in the Netherlands colonial rice breeding and agricultural statistics Ideas affected the organisation as much as the other way round The net result was an institutional development in which the values of academic science were rated higher than the values of practice This book is a distinctive piece of work as it treats the dynamics of science in a European as well as in a colonial context These different ecological and social environments lead to other forms of knowledge and experimentation as well as other ways of organising science venereal disease has become a malady that may confront any one of us This book examines the different stages in this long development and reveals the strange disjunction between waves of public anxiety and the factual incidence of disease in this troubled overlap between medical science and social life It describes the various efforts that have been made since 1850 to contain the hazard of sexually transmitted diseases and places the changing views on venereal infection in their historical and social context The comparisons drawn between the late 19th century battle against syphilis and present day responses to the AIDS epidemic underscore the notable changes that have taken place not only in thinking about sexuality but also in the authority of the medical profession and in the position of patients vis vis policy makers and all those involved in determining modes of treatment and prevention Clinical Teaching, Past and Present ,2020-01-29 As periodical of the International
