Brown,2021-02-13 HE Goldfinch who lives in Europe is one of the gaudiest of the little feathered brothers He is a very Joseph of birds in his coat of many colors and folk often wonder how he came to have feathers so much more gorgeous than his kindred But after you have read this tale you will wonder no longer You must know that when the Father first made all the birds they were dressed alike in plumage of sober gray But this dull uniform pleased Him no more than it did the birds themselves who begged that they might wear each the particular style which was most becoming and by which they could be recognized afar So the Father called the birds to Him one by one as they stood in line and dipping His brush in the rainbow color box painted each appropriately in the colors which it wears to day Except indeed that some had later adventures which altered their original hues as you shall hear in due season But the Goldfinch did not come with the other birds That tardy little fellow was busy elsewhere on his own affairs and heeded not the Father's command to fall in line and wait his turn for being made beautiful So it happened that not until the painting was finished and all the birds had flown away to admire themselves in the water mirrors of the earth did the Goldfinch present himself at the Father's feet out of breath O Father he panted I am late But I was so busy Pray forgive me and permit me to have a pretty coat like the others You are late indeed said the Father reproachfully and all the coloring has been done You should have come when I bade you Do you not know that it is the prompt bird who fares best My rainbow color box has been generously used and I have but little of each tint left Yet I will paint you with the colors that I have and if the result be ill you have only yourself to blame The Father smiled gently as He took up the brush which He had laid down and dipped it in the first color which came to hand This He used until there was no more when He began with another shade and so continued until the Goldfinch was completely colored from head to foot Such a gorgeous coat His forehead and throat were of the most brilliant crimson His cap and sailor collar were black His back was brown and yellow his breast white his wings golden set off with velvet black and his tail was black with white tipped feathers Certainly there was no danger of his being mistaken for any other bird When the Goldfinch looked down into a pool and saw the reflection of his gorgeous coat he burst out into a song of joy I like it oh I like it he warbled and his song was very sweet Oh I am glad that I was late indeed I am dear Father
