Sustainable Development Studies C.A. Brebbia, E. Marco, J.

Longhurst, C. Booth, 2018-02-01 It is clear that the challenge of achieving a more sustainable development pathway requires both new knowledge and the wider uptake of existing knowledge policies and technologies. It is also essential that sustainability is built into urban development plans as the world's population becomes increasingly urbanised and a wide range of social and environmental problems occur. Containing a series of specially selected papers, this book deals with advances in disciplines contributing to sustainable development such as planning, architecture, engineering, policy making, environmental sciences and economics, and identifies solutions to challenges posed by sustainable development. Written by researchers and practitioners from many different countries, the included papers provide a unique reference of experience and potential solutions to common problems via the application of planning and development strategies, assessment tools and decision making processes.

Business and Development Studies Peter Lund-Thomsen, Michael Wendelboe Hansen, Adam Lindgreen, 2019-10-16 Business and Development Studies: Issues and Perspectives provides a comprehensive collection of cutting edge theoretical and empirical contributions to the emerging field of business and development studies. Compared to more traditional business school accounts of business in developing countries which focus on the challenges and opportunities of doing business in developing countries, this anthology explores whether, how and under what conditions business contributes to the achievement of economic, social and environmental goals in developing countries. The book consolidates the current status of academic work on business and development, identifies state of the art in relation to this academic field and establishes a future research agenda for business and development studies as an emerging academic discipline within the social sciences. The book will be of interest to researchers and students including economists, geographers, sociologists, political scientists, corporate social responsibility specialists and development scholars who are seeking an in depth overview of current debates about the role of business as a development agent in the Global South. The book is also of relevance to practitioners that are engaged in work with the private sector seeking to enhance the positive effects and minimize the negative economic, social and environmental consequences of business activity in the Global South.

Fairness and Justice in Natural Resource Politics Melanie Pichler, Cornelia Staritz, Karin Küblböck, Christina Plank, Werner Raza, Fernando Ruiz Peyré, 2016-08-05 As demand for natural resources increases due to the rise in world population and living standards, conflicts over their access and control are becoming more prevalent. This book critically assesses different approaches to and conceptualizations of resource fairness and justice and applies them to the analysis of resource conflicts. Approaches addressed include cosmopolitan liberalism, political economy and political ecology. These are applied at various scales: local, national, international and to initiatives and instruments in public and private resource governance such as corporate social responsibility instruments, certification schemes, international law and commodity markets. In doing so, the contributions contrast existing approaches to fairness and justice and extend them by taking into account the interplay between political scales, regions, resources and power structures in globalized resource politics. Various case studies are included concerning agriculture agrofuels land grabbing water resources mining and biodiversity The volume adds to the academic and policy debate by bringing together a variety of disciplines and perspectives in order to advance both a research and policy agenda that puts notions of resource fairness and justice center stage International Studies Stanley Toops, Mark Allen Peterson, Walt Vanderbush, Naaborle Sackeyfio, Sheldon Anderson, 2021-09-28 This book provides a much needed classroom text in international studies that is genuinely interdisciplinary in its approach International Studies focuses specifically on five core disciplines history geography anthropology political science and economics and describes them in relation to one another as well as their individual and collective contributions to the study of global issues The expert authors also emphasize the continuing importance of area studies within an interdisciplinary and global framework applying its interdisciplinary framework to substantive issues in seven regions Europe East Asia and the Pacific South and Central Asia sub Saharan Africa the Middle East and North Africa Latin America and North America This new edition has been completely updated and substantially revised with two new chapters on Media Sovereignty and Cybersecurity and Sustainable Development This disciplinary and regional combination offers a useful and cohesive framework for teaching students a substantive and comprehensive approach to understanding global issues Global Nutrition Report 2014 International Food Policy Research Institute, 2014-11-13 At the 2013 Nutrition for Growth Summit in London 96 signatories governments civil society organizations donors United Nations agencies and businesses agreed to support the creation of an annual report on global nutrition that would be authored by an independent expert group in partnership with a large number of contributors The first edition of this report the Global Nutrition Report 2014 puts a spotlight on worldwide progress by the 193 member countries of the United Nations in improving their nutrition status identifies bottlenecks to change highlights opportunities for action and contributes to strengthened nutrition accountability on country and global levels Individual Differences in Arithmetical Development Ann Dowker, Bert De Smedt, Annemie Desoete, 2020-01-03 This eBook is a collection of articles from a Frontiers Research Topic Frontiers Research Topics are very popular trademarks of the Frontiers Journals Series they are collections of at least ten articles all centered on a particular subject With their unique mix of varied contributions from Original Research to Review Articles Frontiers Research Topics unify the most influential researchers the latest key findings and historical advances in a hot research area Find out more on how to host your own Frontiers Research Topic or contribute to one as an author by contacting the Frontiers Editorial Office frontiersin.org/about/contact The Cambridge Encyclopedia of Child Development Brian Hopkins, Elena Geangu, Sally Linkenauger, 2017-10-19 Updated and expanded to 124 entries The Cambridge Encyclopedia of Child Development remains the authoritative reference in the field Rule of Law Intermediaries Kristina Simion, 2021-05-06 Scholars puzzle over the conditions that make rule of law development in authoritarian settings successful In this significant contribution focusing on the decade of Myanmar's political transformation Kristina Simion

Measuring resilience in a volatile world, 2014-04-30

Substantial numbers of the world's chronically poor and malnourished population live in an increasingly volatile world. The dangerous nexus of climate change, rapid population growth, conflict, and food price volatility already appears to have pushed several poor regions into states of permanent crisis, even as the rest of the world has seen unprecedented progress against poverty. This disturbing state of affairs, along with our expanded knowledge of the intimate interactions between short-term shocks and long-run development, has catalyzed widespread interest in resilience building and in what such a framework implies for understanding the causes and consequences of acute vulnerability to natural and man-made disasters. In this paper, we ask what this paradigm implies for the measurement and analysis of resilience. Resilience is fundamentally about complex dynamics. Slower-moving ecological, economic, demographic, and social stressors create vulnerability to short-run shocks, which in turn can have long-term consequences by reinforcing preexisting vulnerabilities. In our view, this basic conception of resilience has fundamental measurement implications. First, resilience can be measured and understood only through higher frequency surveys that capture the causes and consequences of time-varying stressors and shocks, including seasonal shocks. Second, resilience can be understood only through surveys that capture the multidimensional complexity of stressors, shocks, and feedback loops, including the complex interactions between economic, social, and ecological forces. Third, the underlying stressors that create vulnerability and the resilience building interventions that reduce vulnerability can be gauged and evaluated only over the longer term. This conceptualization of resilience motivates us to go a step further than existing research on resilience and on food and nutrition security measurement by outlining a far more expansive strategy for improving and scaling up the monitoring, measurement, and analysis of the world's most vulnerable populations. We propose the development of a multicountry system of high frequency, long-term sentinel sites in the world's most vulnerable regions. If implemented along the lines we conceive, this system could be a high return investment for resilience building efforts, since it would serve multiple purposes. This system offers the only rigorous means of monitoring vulnerability and resilience in the world's most volatile regions. This system would bolster existing early warning systems by complementing them with household-level indicators. This system would improve the targeting of emergency resources. This system would be instrumental for diagnosing the underlying sources of vulnerability, for identifying key thresholds of resilience, and for designing appropriate resilience building strategies And this system would provide a rigorous foundation for large scale evaluations of resilience building activities While there are strong justifications for such a system the devil is necessarily in the details and much of this paper is concerned with those details Largely to learn from existing experience we first review existing measurement strategies that are similar in purpose or design to the sentinel system outlined above When implemented long term high frequency measurement systems have often yielded great benefits but been hampered by cost lack of institutional coordination and insufficient dissemination and usage of data The need to keep costs down and benefits widespread therefore motivates us to consider which countries in the world have the highest priority for the development of sentinel sites based on indicators such as child nutrition and health outcomes exposure to disasters and past emergency assistance levels from the international community We then turn to crucial issues of data collection design by outlining a hybrid sampling and survey design that will help achieve the various objectives outlined above while keeping costs down We also argue that the proliferation of mobile phones and other information and communications technologies offers substantial scope for a cost effective system of this kind far more so than would have been available in the past Finally we consider who should lead and contribute to this ambitious effort Since the principal advantage of this approach is that it can yield benefits for a wide range of institutions and purposes relief and development operations and research social and biophysical sciences and since the costs of a long term commitment to these sentinel surveys would be large indeed for any single agency we propose the need for a relatively broad consortium of international donors This consortium should first focus on establishing partnerships with national governments and then commit to long term resilience monitoring as well as domestic capacity building With this essential commitment in place this consortium would then need to secure implementing partners with a permanent presence on the ground as well as the technical expertise of international organizations of various sorts Ultimately we argue it is only this kind of long term cooperative commitment that will provide a scientific evidence base for diagnosing and resolving the world s worst problems of hunger poverty and malnutrition Only this kind of sentinel system can generate the data and evidence needed to inform actions to build resilience and to help the global community eliminate extreme poverty in the generation ahead The status quo is simply not enough
