THE ISSUE

A leading packaging company, with major operations in North America and Europe, has grown steadily over the decades. Today, the company has an extensive supply chain for supporting complex business needs—as the company works to deliver packaging solutions as well as other products and solutions. As business complexity has grown, having an integrated, connected planning process has become imperative for the organization—essential for greater visibility and more informed decision-making.

THE SOLUTION

To help transform planning and provide a clearer view across the supply chain, the company teamed with Deloitte to deploy SAP® Integrated Business Planning (SAP IBP)—a cloud-based solution that combines sales and operations planning (S&OP), forecasting, and demand, response and supply, demand-driven replenishment, and inventory planning. The move has allowed the packaging company to make its S&OP processes more effective by harmonizing planning across business units, through a single integrated model. The project was implemented in phases, helping the company bring the benefits of SAP IBP to related business processes, such as budget planning and scheduling.
