Now is the time for a comprehensive status report on state of the art research and methods by leading scholars in a variety of disciplines on program evaluation. This outstanding collection of contributions will serve as a valuable reference tool for academics, policymakers, and practitioners for many years to come.

Donald S. Siegel, University at Albany, SUNY, US. There has been a dramatic increase in expenditures on public goods over the past thirty years, particularly in the area of research and development. As governments explore the many opportunities for growth in this area, they and the general public are becoming increasingly concerned with the transparency, accountability, and performance of public programs. This pioneering Handbook offers a collection of critical essays on the theory and practice of program evaluation, written by some of the most well-known experts in the field. As this volume demonstrates, a wide variety of methodologies exist to evaluate, particularly the objectives and outcomes of research and development programs. These include surveys, statistical and econometric estimations, patent analyses, bibliometrics, scientometrics, network analyses, case studies, and historical tracings. Contributors divide these and other methods and applications into four categories: economic, non-economic, hybrid, and data-driven, in order to discuss the many factors that affect the utility of each technique and how that impacts the technological, economic, and societal forecasts of the programs in question. Scholars, practitioners, and students with an interest in economics and innovation will all find this Handbook an invaluable resource.

Battery Technology for Electric Vehicles Albert Link, Alan O'Connor, Troy Scott, 2015-04-10. Electric drive vehicles (EDVs) are seen on American roads in increasing numbers. Related to this market trend and critical for it to increase are improvements in battery technology. Battery Technology for Electric Vehicles examines in detail the research support from the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) for the development of nickel metal hydride (NiMH) and lithium ion (Li-ion) batteries used in EDVs. With public support comes accountability of the social outcomes associated with public investments. The book overviews DOE investments in advanced battery technology, documents the adoption of these batteries in EDVs on the road, and calculates the economic benefits associated with these improved technologies. It provides a detailed global evaluation of the net social benefits associated with DOE's investments, the results of the benefit-to-cost ratio of over 3.6 to 1, and the life cycle approach that allows adopted EDVs to remain on the road over their expected future life, thus generating economic and environmental health benefits into the future.
