Animal Models for Assessing Countermeasures to Bioterrorism Agents National Research Council,Division on Earth and Life Studies,Institute for Laboratory Animal Research,Committee on Animal Models for Assessing Countermeasures to Bioterrorism Agents,2012-01-09 The Transformational Medical Technologies TMT has been a unique component of the U S Department of Defense DoD medical biodefense efforts since 2006 Its mission is to advance countermeasure research and development in support of the broader goal of the DoD to protect warfighters from emerging infectious diseases and future genetically engineered biological weapons The TMT using advanced science and technology approaches focused on the development of roadspectrum countermeasures that target common host and pathogen pathways or enhance the host s immune response Many of these pathogens are lethal or cause such debilitating diseases in humans that it is ethically inappropriate to test the efficacy of these countermeasures in human volunteers In lieu of human participants these products may be tested in animals and approved for human use under the provisions of the Food and Drug Administration FDA s 2002 Animal Rule The reliance on animal models for the development and licensure of medical countermeasures against biothreats is challenging for a number of reasons The ad hoc Committee on Animal Models for Assessing Countermeasures to Bioterrorism Agents prepared a consensus report that would address the challenges stemming from developing and testing medical countermeasures against biothreat agents in animal models Animal Models for Assessing Countermeasures to Bioterrorism Agents evaluates how well the existing TMT employed or candidate animal models reflect the pathophysiology clinical picture and treatment of human disease as related to the agents of interest The report addresses the process and or feasibility of developing new animal models for critical biodefense research placing emphasis on the need for a robust and expeditious validation process in terms of the FDA s Animal Rule The report also evaluates alternatives to the use of animal models based on the premise of the Three Rs

Depression in Parents, Parenting, and Children Institute of Medicine, National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Committee on Depression, Parenting Practices, and the Healthy Development of Children, 2009-09-28 Depression is a widespread condition affecting approximately 7.5 million parents in the U.S. each year and may be putting at least 15 million children at risk for adverse health outcomes. Based on evidentiary studies, major depression in either parent can interfere with parenting quality and increase the risk of children developing mental, behavioral, and social problems. Depression in Parents, Parenting, and Children highlights disparities in the prevalence, identification, treatment, and prevention of parental depression among different sociodemographic populations. It also outlines strategies for effective intervention and identifies the need for a more interdisciplinary approach that takes biological, psychological, behavioral, interpersonal, and social contexts into consideration. A major challenge to the effective management of parental depression is developing a treatment and prevention strategy that can be introduced within a two-generation framework conducive for parents and their children. Thus far, both the federal and state response to the problem has been fragmented, poorly funded, and lacking proper oversight. This study examines options for widespread implementation of best practices as well as strategies that can be effective in diverse service settings for diverse populations of children and their families. The delivery of adequate screening and successful detection and treatment of a depressive illness and prevention of its effects on parenting and the health of children is a formidable challenge to modern health care systems. This study offers seven solid recommendations designed to increase awareness about and remove barriers to care for both the depressed adult and prevention of effects in the child. The report will be of particular interest to federal health officers, mental and behavioral health providers in diverse parts of health care delivery systems, health policy staff, state legislators, and the general public.
