German Notes on Minor Tactics (Classic Reprint) ,2015-07-11 Excerpt from German Notes on Minor Tactics The appended translation of an order dated February 7 1917 found at the front of the army shows that the Germans then considered special antiaircraft pieces insufficient for combat against enemy airplanes in case of important operations and had considered using barrage batteries for repulsing low flying infantry airplanes This order prescribed the initial training for aerial barrage The result of the experiment is unknown It is not impossible that during the next offensive the enemy will attack our infantry in their trenches with so large a number of aircraft that it will be necessary to combat them not only with the special antiaircraft batteries but also with a part of the barrage batteries In general buried or casemated batteries will be used against enemy airplanes flying above their respective barrage areas In short momentarily they will have to project aerial barrages Fire against airplanes should be conducted in the simplest possible fashion The distance separating the battery from the most advanced trench should be taken as range always supposing the direction of flight to be perpendicular to the direction of the barrage fire Direct laying should be used when possible If not the laying in direction should be that of the barrage fire and should sweep the zone of the barrage fire About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Manual of Classical Literature. The Outlook ,1895 Asia Looks Seaward Toshi Yoshihara,James R. Holmes,2007-11-30 Asia is headed toward an uncertain and potentially volatile future in the maritime arena The two rising Asian powers China and India dependent as they are on seaborne commerce for their economic well being have clearly set their eyes on the high seas Yoshihara and Holmes offer a stark warning that many strategists in Beijing and New Delhi appear spellbound by the more militant visions of sea power Indeed both powers appear poised to develop the capacity to control the sea lanes through which the bulk of their commerce flows If they enter the nautical environment with such a martial mindset Asia could very well fall victim to regional rivalries that give rise to a vicious cycle of competition Yoshihara and Holmes provide the first examination of the simultaneous rise of two naval powers and the potential impact that such an oceanic reconfiguration of power in Asia could have on long term regional stability Their study analyzes the maritime interests and strategies of the littoral states in Asia as they prepare for the expected reordering of nautical affairs This long overdue assessment revisits underlying assumptions that have prevailed among strategy makers and provides a concrete policy framework for reducing the risk of confrontation in Asian waters
