Craig, 2016 Growing evidence supports the important relationship between trauma and academic failure Along with the failure of zero tolerance a new understanding of children s disruptive behaviour educators are changing the way they view children s academic and social problems In response the trauma sensitive schools movement presents a new vision for promoting children s success This book introduces this promising approach and provides K 5 education professionals with clear explanations of current research and dozens of practical creative ideas to help them view poor academic and social progress through a trauma sensitive lens create a school climate that fosters safety and resiliency in vulnerable children establish relationships with children that support their efforts to self regulate design instruction that reflects the social nature of the brain work with the brain s neuroplasticity to increase children s executive function and reduce teacher attrition in high risk schools by decreasing secondary traumatic stress Integrating research on children s neurodevelopment and educational best practices this important book will build the capacity of teachers and school administrators to successfully manage the behaviour of children with symptoms of complex developmental trauma

Trauma-sensitive Schools Susan E. Craig, 2016 Making a Positive Impact in Rural Places R. Martin Reardon, Jack Leonard, 2018-03-01 Following on from the preceding volume in this series that focused on innovation and implementation in the context of school university community collaborations in rural places this volume explores the positive impact of such collaborations in rural places focusing specifically on the change agency of such collaborations The relentless demand of urban places in general for the food and resources e g mineral and energy resources originating in rural places tends to overshadow the impact of the inevitable changes wrought by increasing efficiency in the supply chain Youth brought up in rural places tend to gravitate to urban places for higher education and employment social interaction and cultural affordances and only some of them return to enrich their places of origin On one hand the outcome of the arguable predominance of more populated areas in the national consciousness has been described as urbanormativity a sense that what happens in urban areas is the norm By implication rural areas strive to approach the norm On the other hand a mythology of rural places as repositories of traditional values while flattering fails to take into account the inherent complexities of the rural context The chapters in this volume are grouped into four parts the first three of which explore in turn collaborations that target instructional leadership increase opportunities for underserved people and target wicked problems The fourth part consists of four chapters that showcase international perspectives on school university community collaborations between countries Australia and the United States within China within Africa and within Australia The overwhelming sense of the chapters in this volume is that the most compelling evidence of impact of school university community collaborations in rural places emanates from collaborations brokered by schools communities to which universities bring pertinent resources Handbook of Australian School Psychology Monica Thielking, Mark D.
