

- Chain Dimensioning – A method of dimensioning in which each dimension starts from the end of the previous dimension.

- Rules of Dimensioning – A set of standards which must be followed in a technical working drawing for specifying the dimensions of a design.

Key Dimensioning Rules

1. Dimensions should NOT be duplicated, or the same information given in two different ways.
2. No unnecessary dimensions should be used – only those needed to produce or inspect the part.
3. Whenever possible, avoid dimensioning to hidden lines and features.
4. Avoid dimensioning over or through the object.
5. Whenever possible, locate dimensions between adjacent views.
6. In general, a circle is dimensioned by its diameter and an arc by its radius.
7. Holes are located by their centerlines, which may be extended and used as extension lines.
8. Holes should be located and sized in the view that shows the feature as a circle.
9. Do not cross a dimension line with an extension line, avoid crossing dimensions with leader lines.
10. Leader lines should not occur horizontally or vertically.

9.18: Title Block, Parts List/Balloon and Exploded Assembly

- Balloons – A circled number identifying each part shown in an assembly drawing. Also called a ball tag or bubble number.
- Documentation – 1. The documents that are required for something, or that give evidence or proof of something. 2. Drawings or printed information that contains instructions for assembling, installing, operating, and servicing.
- Exploded Assembly – An assembly drawing in which parts are moved out of position along an axis so that each individual part is visible.
- Parts List – A list of materials or parts specified for a project. Also referred to as a bill of materials or BOM.
- Title Block – A table located in the bottom right-hand corner of an engineering drawing that identifies, in an organized way, all of the necessary information (designer, title, date, scale, company or school, logo, material) that is not given on the drawing itself. Also referred to as a title strip.
- Local Note (Annotation) – Connected to specific features on the views of the drawing. Also known as annotations.
- General Note – Notes placed separate from the views; relate to the entire drawing.
