students have been impacted by the digital divide in the context of the pandemic. It puts a spotlight on the approaches, experiences, and case analyses from various geographies in the region to study transitions in inclusivity. Universities and institutes of higher education have had to reconsider their digital offerings and services all the more since the onset of the pandemic but have in many instances failed to fully account for how Internet access can be limited, unavailable, or unaffordable for many students. As a result, specially abled learners, students without sufficient technological resources such as those living in remote areas where there are little or no Internet facilities, have been, however unintentionally, neglected. While universities implemented their own practices, processes, and policies to reach and teach disadvantaged learners, they had to further adapt these strategies, re-aligning them to meet the unprecedented circumstances and concomitant needs of specially abled learners, and there is still much more to do. This book consolidates regional perspectives on how to work towards goals of inclusivity and bridge the digital divide, looking into and beyond the conditions of the pandemic. Relevant to scholars and policymakers, this book is of interest to those focused on digitisation and the transition to the new normal in higher education.
