

There are a lot of movies produced in the past few years, as movies have turned into a big form of entertainment due to the hour-long film & also the big silver screen. Precedently, when the movies are created, they are made for live-action film only, but in the last few decades, animated motion pictures have reached from the television to the movie screen, as movie budget would be less costly while computer software have been invented to make animation more uncomplicated. Nevertheless, there is still a thick line of difference that separates the various movies animated today. These types of differences can be in the form of their studios, genre & animation. Such movies that can illustrate a huge diversity in animated films are Despicable Me & Paranorman.

To begin with, different films would, of course, be made by different people, who work for different studios & companies. Despicable Me for instance, is made by Illumination studios, a branch from Universal pictures. As a result of Universal having more investments on other works such as TV shows, Parks and Resorts & other animation films, Universal is a more rich company & thus provides a bigger movie budget to the film. Consequently, due to the power & popularity it has, Universal pictures have the capability to hire highly rated experienced writers, animators and voice actors with their expensive offers to the celebrities. The voice actors they hire for the film are even famous A-listed stars such as Russell Brand, Miranda Cosgrove, Steve Carrell & more. On the other hand, Paranorman is made by a newer & inexperienced studio in the industry, Laika studios, which only made 2 movies so far. For the reason that Laika studios don't have a larger power, popularity & fortune, as they have made only a single but successful movie before Paranorman, the studio had to use a lower budget, thus, hire unpopular, inexperienced writers, animators & voice actors to abstain from drastically dropping the budget. As claimed by 'The-numbers.com', Paranorman has $10 million lower on budget compared to Despicable Me <sup>[1]</sup>. The difference would also impact the audience, as more people would watch a film made by a bigger studio.
